Plea to Break Wages-Hours Jam Is Made By O'Connor

House Rules Committee Urged to Rush Report on Measure.

Serious Blockade Forecast in House

Crop Control Legislation Faces Opposition in Extra Session.

In a surprise move to expedite special session business, Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee, appealed in a letter to stand-pat committeemen yesterday to break their deadlock and speedily report out the President's controversial wages and hours bill.

Second item on the Administration's agenda for special session business, the wages and hours bill passed the Senate last session but struck a stone wall of opposition in O'Connor's influential Rules Committee.

With proposed crop control legislation facing a farm organization fight at the outset of the November 15 session, and the wages and hours bill at an impasse, a serious blockade appeared likely to develop on the very measures for which Congress was called back.

Committee May Meet Earlier.

Members of the House Rules group may be called back by O'Connor before Congress opens to consider action on the wages and hours measure. If his committee again refuses to act, Administration forces will continue circulation of a House petition to force it to the floor, but that, even if fully signed, would delay action a month or more.

O'Connor referred to the petition maneuver in his letter to Rules Committee members, and used it as an argument in behalf of direct Rules Committee action. He said his letter in substance appealed to committeemen to permit a report on the bill "for practical reasons."

"If permitted to come out on the floor, under a committee rule," O'Connor said he argued in his letter, "the rule would have better chance of more adequate debate and better understanding."

Under the petition procedure, should the committee refuse to act, only 20 minutes is allotted for debate on a motion to discharge the committee—10 minutes on each side of the question. If the discharge motion were adopted, the House would proceed to immediate consideration of the rule now tied up in committee.

Bill Reported Favorably.

The wages and hours bill, setting up a Federal board to regulate wages under standards up to 40 cents an hour and down to 40 hours a week, was favorably reported last session by the House Labor Committee, but a rule is necessary to give it floor "right-of-way."

While some pessimism prevailed

Mine and Bombs Kill 6 in Palestine

Jerusalem, Oct. 14 (AP).—Six persons were killed and six were wounded today in Palestine disorders.

Three lost their lives when a land mine blew up a train near Kalkilieh, 20 miles northeast of Jaffa. An Arab was killed and three Jews were wounded by a bomb explosion in a suburban bus. Snipers firing on another bus wounded three Jews. Police said a second bus ambush brought death to an Arab and another Arab was killed when a bomb he intended to throw at a bus exploded in his hands.

McNinch Ousts 3 Aids; Opens FCC Clean-up

J. F. KILLEEN. R. T. BARTLEY. A. G. PATTERSON.

Without jobs, following Chairman McNinch's reorganization order yesterday, were J. F. Killeen, friend of Postmaster General Farley; R. T. Bartley, nephew of Representative Sam Rayburn, and A. G. Patterson, cousin of Supreme Court Justice Black.

Black's Relative, Rayburn's Nephew and Ex-Aide to Farley Jobless as Three Divisions Are Abolished.

By Robert C. Albright.

Chairman Frank R. McNinch, appointed by President Roosevelt to "clean up the mess" in the Federal Communications Commission, struck unexpectedly yesterday in a reorganization order abolishing three autonomous commission divisions.

The order, approved unanimously by the commission, wiped out as of November 15 the powerful Broadcast, Telegraph and Telephone divisions, transferred their powers to the full commission, and left jobless the three division directors.

John F. Killeen, director of the Broadcast Division and a former political aide of Postmaster General James A. Farley.

A. G. Patterson, director of the Telephone Division, and a relative of Associate Justice Hugo L. Black, former United States Senator from Alabama.

The diminutive McNinch, former chairman of the Federal Power Commission, paid tribute to the "loyalty, faithfulness and capacity" of the three men, and said it was a "source of regret" to the commission that their jobs had to go.

McNinch denied reorganization of the commission was designed to oust the three men.

"Obviously," he said, "the com-

Landon Sought For Chairman Of Republicans

By Franklyn Waltman.

A movement is on foot within the Republican Party to supplant John Hamilton with Alf M. Landon as the chairman of the National Committee, and, as such, the party manager. At least trial balloons are being sent up to ascertain the sentiment of the rank and file of the party to this change.

Whether Landon, titular leader of the party and its standard bearer in the 1936 Presidential battle, would accept the National Committee chairmanship is not known. But if sufficient sentiment is developed for the proposal, party leaders believe he can be prevailed on to serve from a sense of duty.

Senator Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan, who at the moment appears to be the Republican favorite for nomination in 1940, is reported agreeable to the proposal to place Landon in the chairmanship, although he has not made any public statement on that subject—or on any other subject of party management or strategy.

Some of those favoring Landon for the chairmanship feel it is a stone with which two birds could be killed. Placing Landon in the chairmanship, it is argued, would eliminate him from any further Presidential consideration. At the same time,

'Can't Satisfy Both Factions,' NLRB Replies

Board Calm Under Bitter Attacks; Cites Huge Membership Gains.

By Sidney Olson.

Target for the attacks of both the Committee for Industrial Organization and the American Federation of Labor, the National Labor Relations Board answered both of its assailants last night by declaring it "has never entertained the hope" it could satisfy both sides as long as the labor war continues.

In a quietly worded statement, issued after all-day conferences, the board asserted "the conflict between the two major labor organizations may tend to obscure the fundamental results" of the board's work under the national labor relations act.

"Naturally, the board's decisions as to what constitutes the proper unit for collective bargaining cannot completely satisfy both the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization as long as the craft-industrial union issue continues to divide the ranks of organized labor."

"The essential purpose of the act is to protect all workers in their right to organize into unions of their own choice.

"The energies of the board are chiefly devoted to the protection

A.F.L. Offers C.I.O. a New Peace Plan

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Oct. 14.—The American Federation of Labor sent a new peace proposal to the C. I. O. today in response to the offer John L. Lewis sent here Tuesday.

(John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, now convening in Atlantic City, promised last night to reply today to the peace terms offered by the A. F. of L.)

The proposal was new in that the Federation agreed to enlarge to a reasonable size the executive council's three-man standing peace committee.

Otherwise, it was no different from the offer the federation has stood by since it suspended ten leading C. I. O. unions for insurrection more than a year ago.

It called for committees from the two camps to meet "without conditions or stipulations" to work out a settlement.

U. M. W. A. Inquiry Sought.

Lewis' offer stipulated that the A. F. of L. recognize the principle of the industrial form of labor organization for mass production industries, and proposed that each side send 100 men to the peace conference.

The committee also decided today to ask the Senate Civil Liberties Committee to investigate the United Mine Workers of America. The federation's action followed a speech by Joe Ozanic, president of the Progressive Miners of America, in which Ozanic accused U. M. W. officials of "a reign of terror" in the Illinois coal fields.

Twenty-one Progressive Miner members had been killed during the five-year war between the unions, he asserted.

Ozanic accused U. M. W. officials of driving him out of central Pennsylvania when he tried to organize Progressive locals there.

Green Renamed President.

While a telegraph operator was tapping out the peace plan to the C. I. O. meeting in Atlantic City, N. J., the A. F. of L. convention unanimously elected Green to his thirteenth term as president.

In accepting the post, Green adopted the most conciliatory tone he has used for weeks in discussing the C. I. O. issue.

Although the Federation's peace offer, drafted by Vice President Matthew Woll, said the A. F. of L. was willing to expand its committee, it found fault with the number Lewis suggested.

"We cannot believe the suggestion for a committee of 100 representatives on each side, making up a conference of 200, can serve any useful or practical purpose," it said.

"We prefer to regard the proposal for a conference of 200 rather as an initial method of approach on the

Farley Forecasts 46-State Victory If President Runs

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 14 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley, in an interview here today, said President Roosevelt, if he should seek a third term, "would carry 46 States again, and you can throw in Maine and Vermont, too."

But, he added, the question of whether President Roosevelt will run again "is one that only the President can answer."

Bodies Litter Foreign Area Of Shanghai

Planes Bomb Japanese; Admiral Yarnell Has Narrow Escape.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Friday), Oct. 15.—Chinese troops continued a furious counter-offensive into a bloody Shanghai dawn today, after a night in which Japanese and Chinese fought along the edge of the crowded International Settlement.

An American sailor was wounded when Japanese shrapnel hit the deck of the flagship Augusta. A United States Marine was hit by a stray bullet as the fire of rival lines raked the border of the foreign zone. Lives of hundreds of additional Americans and other foreigners were endangered.

It was estimated more than 100 persons were killed in the Settlement, and an undetermined number wounded. As far as could be learned, no foreigners were killed.

Wounded Carted Away.

Many wounded were carried home in carts and rickshas, and others crawled into any place of shelter to escape the hail of bullets.

(An Exchange Telegraph report to London said five American Marines were hit by stray bullets, but none hurt seriously.)

Dead and dying lay on the streets within view of the Settlement.

More than 15 bombs fell within the Settlement, and many foreign houses, including three with British flags and one with a Nazi flag, were struck by bombs.

The wounded American sailor was J. P. McMichael, radioman third class, who was struck in the temple by a flying fragment of shrapnel as he stood between Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell and Capt. R. F. McConnell, chief of staff, aboard the Augusta.

Sends Boat Through Shellfire.

Yarnell immediately sent a small boat through the cross-fire of shrapnell and machine-gun fire over the Whangpoo River to lodge a protest with Japanese naval authorities. Rear Admiral R. Sukiyama, chief of staff of the Japanese command, immediately tendered regrets personally.

Private Milton O. Hatt, of Crystal River, Fla., stationed with the Fourth Marines, was hit in the arm by a stray bullet as he stood at the sandbag barricade guarding the American defense zone.

Hardly had the battle which raged on land and in the sky Thursday afternoon and night reached a lull, when the Chinese launched the counter-attack, slashing through Japanese lines along East Paoshang and Kwantung roads, into the face of Japanese machine-gun fire.

Chinese reports said 300 Japanese were killed, and claimed the Chinese had advanced across North Szechuan road.

Claim Chinese Repulsed.

This area has been the bitterly contested dividing line between Japanese and Chinese troops on the central front of the Settlement since fighting began two months ago.

A Japanese communique said a battalion of Chinese troops participated in the attack, and said the

Guatemala Places Roosevelt Portrait On Postage Stamp

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt's likeness will appear soon on a Guatemalan postage stamp, but potsal officials here are not overjoyed about it.

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that the Central American government has awarded a contract for printing four new issues of stamps in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the United States Constitution. The stamp bearing the President's picture will sell for 4 cents.

Roy M. North, acting Assistant Postmaster General, commented:

"It is a mighty nice thing, of course, for Guatemala to want to honor the President. But we wish other countries would observe our own rules if the stamp is to be sold in this country."

Federal statutes prohibit the use on stamps, securities or currency of the portrait of a living person. Postal officials said this is to prevent public documents from being used to further an individual's political fortunes.

Secret Police Break Up 'United Anti-Fascist Front' in 24 Hours.

26 May Be Sent To Penal Colony

Conspiracy Known for a Year; Group Is Called Red Propagandists.

By the United Press.

Rome, Oct. 14.—The secret tribunal for defense of the Fascist state tonight sent 17 "young intellectuals" to prison for plotting to overthrow Premier Benito Mussolini's regime, bringing to 26 the number of conspirators convicted during the last 24 hours.

The conspiracy, known as the "United Anti-Fascist Front," was said to have had its headquarters in Paris.

Mussolini's secret police discovered the subversive organization in the autumn of 1936 in Milan. Before a roundup could be made two men alleged to have been the leaders of the plot—Palante Rugginenti and Luigi Favarelli—escaped to Paris. They were reported to be active in anti-Fascist activities there.

Faces Prison Island.

The 28 sentenced included Socialists, Communists and Republicans. They may be sent to the Lipari Prison island.

The 17 men sentenced tonight received terms ranging from 18 months to 18 years on charges of "plotting to change the form of government violently, and the propagation and issue of revolutionary theories."

Nine others whose sentences were announced last night received terms ranging from one year to ten years and five men who stood trial with them were acquitted.

Red Papers Issued.

[The conspirators were arrested, the Associated Press reported, after officials discovered what was termed a secret Communist organization in Bologna affiliated with a Communist group in Paris. Authorities said they were publishing Communist newspapers and spreading Communist propaganda.]

Luigi Gaiani was given an 18-year sentence; Azzolino Sabatini, Bruno Tosarelli and Arturo Vignocchi, 12 years each; Fioravante Ziesi, 10 years; Giuseppe Rosini, 5 years; Vernando Zarri, 3 years, and Eugenio Zambinelli, 2 years. Others were sentenced to from 6 months to a year.

It was the first time since the Ethiopian war that proceedings of the high tribunal for defense of the State have been reported publicly.

Powers Propose Extension of Anti-Piracy Patrols, Joint Action in Balearics; 'Volunteers' Decision Delayed; 50,000 Italians to Libya.

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 14.—Great Britain and France tonight discussed a proposal to extend the Nyon "antipiracy" patrol in an effort to prevent Italian military forces from occupying the Spanish Balearic Island of Minorca.

Premier Mussolini, who at first refused to join the hunt for "pirate" submarines alleged to be from his navy, will be asked to participate in a joint naval occupation of the fortified loyalist island, it was stated.

It was disclosed tonight that Mussolini has not yet actually turned over any of his warships to the "anti-piracy" patrol, the full responsibility for which still rests with the British and French fleets.

France, alleging Italy has nearly 20,000 troops and 200 airplanes on the neighboring island of Majorca held by the Spanish insurgents, is alarmed by what she regards as a menace to French mobilization plans.

A foreign power seizing the Balearics, which are only 200 miles from Italian Sardinia, could seriously affect France's mobilization system and military defenses. A hostile occupation of the islands could prevent France from bringing colonial troops across the Mediterranean from French North Africa in event of a continental war.

If the occupation of Minorca "to safeguard its integrity" materializes, the problem of French and British sea communications will be entirely separated from the problem of compelling Mussolini to withdraw his "volunteer" troops from Spain.

The question of armed foreign intervention in Spain, which has

Franco Planes Blast Way for Gijon Advance

Huge Gap in Government Line Opened to March by the Infantry.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 14.—Insurgent warplanes, blasting a huge gap in the government defense lines in eastern Asturias Province, cleared the way today for an infantry march on Gijon, last government-held seaport on the northwest Spanish coast.

Ear-splitting detonations from 1,000 bombs dropped by the planes, the incessant boom of heavy artillery and an infantry advance indicated that the long-heralded insurgent offensive to clean up the north coast was under way.

Gijon dispatches acknowledged government militia was retreating southwest of Arriondas in face of the general insurgent assault. These reports came after the insurgents crossed the Sella River south of Arriondas.

The advance gave insurgent Generalissimo Franco's troops control of a section south of the junction

Dying Matron Sends Her 'Love' To School She Served 35 Years

Calling her husband, Edmund J. Hickey, to her bedside, Mrs. Annette G. Hickey, 59, supervising matron of the National Training School for Boys for the past 35 years, dictated a letter to Col. Claude D. Jones, superintendent of the institution, before she died yesterday.

It said:

"This is a message from Mrs. Hickey to you and all the people at the school, just a few hours before the end.

"Edmund, tell Colonel and all the officers and boys that I appreciate all the many kindly acts I received during my long illness, the beautiful flowers, dainty things to eat, and the lovely cards.

"For the past two or three months I have felt that it was impossible for me to get well, but I fought a good fight.

"I feel as though I am as prepared to go as I could ever be, having received the last rites of my church, having my spiritual adviser visit me about once a week.

"I am sorry to have to leave my loved ones, and friends, but it has to be so. Love and best wishes to everybody."

Mrs. Hickey had been in a semi-coma for a week. She had been ill since last November.

She is survived, beside her husband, by two sisters, Miss Frances L. Donaldson and Mrs. J. E. Gray, both of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at the home, 1613 Base avenue, Kenilworth, Md., tomorrow at 9 a. m. and at St. Margaret's Catholic Church, Seat Pleasant, Md., at 9:30 a. m. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Bilious Painting 'Suited to Bar' Wins $1,000 For Frenchman; U. S. 4th in Carnegie Show

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 14.—An "abstraction," by Georges Braque, the French painter, was announced winner of the $1,000 first prize in the thirty-fifth International exhibition of paintings at Carnegie Institute tonight.

Braque calls his work "The Yellow Cloth." Insofar as it resembles anything, it seems to be a gray, green, yellow canvas representing a table standing in a bilious looking room, the table loaded with a complicated still life composed of a couple of apples, a bottle, something like a spook, and a basket in which reposes a receptacle which may be an empty olive bottle.

Just the same, Carnegie Institute authorities anticipate no such storm as followed two previous prize awards—Peter Blume's "South of Scranton" and Franklin Watkins' "Suicide in Costume."

Braque's prize canvas would be, Homer Saint-Gaudens remarked the other day, "excellent over a cocktail bar."

The director of fine arts at Carnegie Institute meant no disrespect. "The public doesn't always realize," he added, "that art has more than one function. The question is not whether one kind of painting is better. The question is 'Does it fulfill its function?' In that sense, the Braque might be excellent over (for example) a modern cocktail bar, and terrible somewhere else."

Felice Casorati's beautifully painted "Woman Near a Table" gets second prize and $800 for Italy; and Josef Pieper, Nazi artist from Dusseldorf, is given third prize ($500) for a remote and cool study of family life called "Family Portrait"—three children and three adults conventionally grouped.

America runs fourth to France, Italy, and Germany. First of the four honorable mentions (they carry awards of $400, $300, $200, and $100, respectively) goes to Robert Philipp, of New York City, for his bitter anecdotal canvas, "Dust to Dust," a study of a hillside burial in the rain.

Second mention is for Oskar Kokoschka, German painter now living in Prague, whose entry is still another study of the Karlsbrucke, in Prague. Third is for Emilio Grau-Sala, Spaniard, now of Paris, who has painted a vague, almost pastel-like canvas showing mama and three empty-faced children at the fair. Marcel Gromaire, of Paris, gets fourth mention for his "The Night Watchman," apparently the Wizard of Oz succumbing to the vogue of the abstraction.

Coldest Weather Of Fall Forecast For City Today

The coldest weather of the season and possibly the first official frost were predicted for the District today.

The temperature, the forecaster said, was expected to be in the mid-thirties, with a clear sky, light frost in the suburbs and gentle northwest winds.

Yesterday's lowest reading was 45, recorded at 7:15 o'clock in the morning, while the high was 51 at 1:50 in the afternoon.

Treasury Fights Business Profit Levy Repeal

Efforts to Be Made, However, to Remove Inequities of Tax.

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury will oppose repeal of the tax on undistributed corporation profits when it submits to Congress its suggestions for revision of the general tax structure, officials disclosed yesterday.

Various business groups, including the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the National Association of Manufacturers, have recommended repeal or sweeping modification of the levy, which ranges from 7 to 27 per cent. They contend it retards employment, burdens small corporations and penalizes business expansion.

Officials said, however, that the Treasury's tax experts "are in general agreement" that the tax should be retained, and that no changes should be made which would impair seriously its revenue-producing power. They said an effort will be made to remove "inequities."

Secretary Morgenthau told his press conference yesterday that recommendations for tax revision will be ready for submission to a House ways and means sub-committee November 4.

Morgenthau declined to discuss details of the program, or to say whether it would involve an increase in the aggregate tax load.

After a recent conference with Roswell Magill, Undersecretary of the Treasury, Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, said Magill mentioned the possibility of increasing tax rates on middle-bracket individual incomes. Celler and Morris S. Tremaine, New York State comptroller, had gone to Magill to criticize the profits tax.

The complexity of tax revision, plus the probability that numerous groups will seek a hearing, may delay presentation of a new tax measure until well after the regular Congressional session starts in January.

No attempt will be made to revamp the tax system at the special session convening November 15, officials said.

Laundry Workers Join With C. I. O.

The local Laundry Workers, Cleaners and Dyers Union yesterday was affiliated with the C.I.O. through Local 188, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

Recently the local organization sponsored strikes against 13 establishments here.

An organization campaign will be started at once, Calvin Cousins, president of the local, announced yesterday. The goal will be to enroll 7,000 workers in laundries, cleaning and dying establishments and retail tailor shops. At the same time he predicted that the union would become the largest C.I.O. organization in Washington.

Ranks of Illiterate Reduced by 700,000

By the Associated Press.

Dr. L. R. Alderman, director of the education division, said yesterday the division's adult education classes are speeding up the decline of illiteracy in the South.

He praised co-operation and leadership of Southern educators in the program.

The WPA's goal is to reduce the total illiterate population of the United States by 1,000,000 in 1938. The illiteracy total was 4,202,759, or 4.3 per cent, in the 1930 census.

Dr. Alderman estimated that 700,000 have been taught to read and write already.

WILLIAM A. MAIO.

His Suggestion for a Small, Unicameral Legislature for the District Widely Acclaimed; Has Lived in Capital 36 Years.

By Christine Sadler.

Although the District's voteless and unrepresented citizens take many complaints to Capitol Hill, few of them have more than general betterment suggestions to make. With William A. Maio, 1018 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, it is differenet.

Maio knows just the kind of local government he wants, and last May he sent a full mimeographed copy of his thoughts up to Senator Elmer Thomas, chairman of the subcommittee on District appropriations. A small unicameral legislature with locally elected members, a capitation tax to bear election expenses, elected members of the board of education, and retention of the three commissioners as the executive body were among the chief government features suggested.

The plan received wide aproval, and Maio still believes it is sound. To put some force behind his opinions of the voting question he started the meetings that resulted in organization of the new District of Columbia Suffrage Association, of which he is second vice president.

Suffrage His Main Goal.

Local suffrage, and through it some control over taxation and budget matters, he considers far and away the most important question now before Washingtonians.

President of the Southeast Citizens Association for his fourth term and chairman of the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations since it was organized three years ago, Maio represents a large group of District citizens.

He has lived in Washington for 36 years, during the last third of which he has interested himself actively in civic welfare problems.

The Southeast association is 31 years old and was the first local citizenship group to incorporate. It is composed of approximately 300 members. In the council are three representatives from each of the following ten citizenship associations located in that area: Anacostia, Bradbury Heights, Congress Heights, Hillcrest, Lincoln Park, North Randle Community, Randle Highlands, Southeast, Summit Park and Washington Highlands.

In union there is real strength, these groups declared when they decided to pool their efforts three years ago. Their No. 1 project now is a new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge across the Anacostia River. Other parts of their 14-point civic program call for widening of Independence avenue, extension of Virginia avenue to the boulevard along the Anacostia, and a branch library for Anacostia.

During its 36 years the Southeast association has accomplished many things for the good of its neighborhood, had streets widened, got new car tracks, worked for beautification of Folger Park, and more recently got an appropriation of $210,000 with which work can be started on a new vocational high school in the Southeast.

Fig Trees in His Garden.

Hard working and home loving, Maio spends any time he has left over from a full-time business job and his numerous civic activities working in his garden and adding to his stamp collection. In his garden are two fig-bearing trees, planted by him four years ago—just to see if the Washington climate justified his hopes. Big bowls of fresh figs and gasps of astonishment from the neighbors prove that his optimism was well founded.

His family consists of Mrs. Maio, a pretty teen-age daughter and an 8-year-old son. He takes an active part in drives of the Community Chest and is a member of the newly organized committee concerned with getting a monument erected in the District to Marconi, the wireless inventor "who made radio possible."

ON MONDAY—Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of Kalorama Citizens' Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Cotton Exports And Domestic Use Increase

86,000-Bale Gain Registered in Shipments in Two Months.

By the Associated Press.

Government agencies reported yesterday that both domestic consumption and exports of cotton the first two months of the current season were larger than the August-September totals last year.

Commerce Department figures showed, however, that domestic consumption declined from August to September while foreign purchases increased.

The Census Bureau reported domestic mills used 1,206,217 bales of lint cotton during the two-month period this year compared with 1,204,781 bales last season. September consumption was smaller than August or September, 1936.

Exports of 837,859 bales during August and September were about 86,000 bales larger than the same period last season. Government trade experts valued the exports at $53,762,000 compared with $49,852,000 last season.

The volume gain was 11 per cent, but lower prices reduced the increase in value to 7 per cent.

The reports indicated the Far Eastern conflict had reduced American cotton exports to Japan about $10,000,000 in the two-month period. Japan took 188,367 bales valued at $12,337,000 during August and September last year compared with 41,936,000 bales valued at $2,682,000 this season.

Ready for Red Cross Broadcast

It will last all night, so Arthur Godfrey is attired for such an occasion. The broadcast will begin over WJSV tomorrow morning at 1 o'clock. Godfrey is being assisted just now by Miss Hebe Reynolds, daughter of Maj. Gen. C. R. Reynolds, surgeon general of the Army.

2 Days Remain For Red Cross Drive in D. C.

54,079 Join, Including Roosevelt; Officials Hope to Get 75,000.

With officials expressing confidence that the goal of 75,000 members will be reached, the Red Cross Roll Call will close tomorrow.

President Roosevelt's membership has been received, and an all-night radio program, featuring Arthur Godfrey, assisted by Johnny Salb, will start at 1 a. m. over WJSV.

Mr. Roosevelt's enrollment arrived at headquarters shortly after noon yesterday, with eight others from the White House, making a record of 100 per cent for the Executive Mansion and the office staff.

A total of 54,079 memberships had been listed at the close of yesterday's campaigning.

Indications are that many memberships have not been reported up to date, General Chairman Marcy L. Sperry said.

Toothache, Stock Trend Worry Violinist Kreisler

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—A toothache and the condition of the stock market were bothering Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, when he arrived here on the Europa today after a two-month trip to Switzerland, Austria and Italy.

"It's not my own financial affairs I'm worried about," said the musician, who spends more money for violins than he does for securities, "but those of the whole world."

'Resolution' Cited To Balance Budget

Houston, Tex., Oct. 14 (AP).—Jesse E. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, said in a speech today, "I know beyond question of a doubt that the President is determined to balance the budget."

"All governmental agencies are being required to curtail and reduce their demands upon the Treasury," he added.

Addressing the Independence Petroleum Association convention, Jones said he did not assume to speak for the Government.

Rush to See Salary List Irks Doughton

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, balked yesterday at permitting the House Ways and Means Committee quarters to become again the scene of the annual rush to view the lists of persons drawing corporate salaries of $15,000 or more, which are sent to Congress by the Treasury every January.

"I'm through being bedevilled by people who want to make up sucker lists," he said.

Foreign Minister Denies Belgian Pledge to Reich

Brussels, Oct. 14 (AP).—Minister of Foreign Affairs Paul Spaak, acting to quash foreign rumors, told the foreign committees of both the House and Chamber today that Belgium made no pledge of a territorial, colonial or economic nature to Germany in return for yesterday's German pledge of respect for Belgium's inviolability.

Barbour Says U. S. Is Closer to War

By the Associated Press.

Hackensack, N. J., Oct. 14.—Former United States Senator W. Warren Barbour says the United States is one step nearer war today, whether she realizes it or not.

Speaking at a Republican rally, Barbour said the ituation today was much like that of 1916.

"The President," he said, "has precipitously trod on dangerous ground, and, in my opinion, is stepping wholly in the wrong direction."

Poke Fun at Roosevelt, Not Al Smith—Cohan

Boston, Oct. 14 (AP).—Principals in the production of "I'd Rather Be Right," new musical fantasy lampooning President Roosevelt, revealed today a lyric "touching on Al Smith" had been deleted out of deference to the wishes of George M. Cohan, singing and dancing in the leading role.

Fine May Face Thousands on Privilege Tax

Only 12,000 Returns Filed; 6,000 Out; Deadline Set Saturday.

Several thousand business and professional men yesterday were threatened with fines for failure to file business privilege tax returns on time as the District tax committee debated whether it would recommend renewal of the levy next year or substitution of an income or sales tax.

Allan F. Brooke, administrator of the business privilege tax division of the assessor's office, said last night that only about 12,000 returns had been received, leaving approximately 6,000 more unreported.

As Saturday is the deadline for filing the returns without penalty, officials predicted that they will have to invoke provisions of the law which permit imposition of penalties of 10 per cent of the tax, plus an additional 5 per cent for each month delay or fraction thereof.

A steady line of business and professional men flocked to the tax assessor's branch office on the basement floor of the District Building yesterday. Brooke estimated that 1,000 returns were submitted.

13,000 Licenses Issued.

More than 13,000 licenses to do business had been issued at the close of the day, but a large portion of these were issued free to persons whose gross annual income was less than $2,000.

The tax committee, meanwhile, at its second meeting discussed a wide variety of revenue-raising proposals, but reached no decisions, according to Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, chairman.

Increases in license fees to make the charge commensurate with the cost of inspection or special services were considered along with a proposed hike in the intangible personal property tax. The latter, however, was rejected by general denunciation.

The case of the Washington Baseball Club, which pays an annual license fee of $5, again was pointed out as a flagrant example of too low license fees.

Forecast to Be Made.

At next week's meeting, on Wednesday, Auditor Donovan expects to submit a statistical report forecasting expenditures and revenue for each of the next seven fiscal years.

The committee then will seek to draft its tax program to cover the gap between the two sets of figures.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday certified to the District Commissioners $106,176 in taxes on bus lines operating in or through Washington under the license act that imposes a levy of 8 mills per bus mile.

The tax, which is projected a year ahead from November 1, covers an estimated 13,272,084 miles which the buses are expected to travel in the limits of the Capital.

An Ex-Policeman Arrested in D. C. As Dope Peddler

An ex-policeman was being held last night at the First Precinct on a charge of violating the narcotic laws.

Arrested by Detective Sergts. Charles Mansfield and Daniel Jones and a Treasury agent, the man gave his name as Howard C. Ferguson, 29, of 1100 Fourth street northeast.

According to police, the man had been suspected of peddling drugs for two months. Several "buys" were negotiated, police said.

Ferguson is being held under $5,000 bond. Police said he at one time was attached to the Ninth Precinct.

Brady Survivor Taken to Indiana

Indianapolis, Oct. 14 (AP).—Manacled hand and foot, James Dalhover, sole survivor of the one-time braggart Brady gang, was held in a closely watched cell under $50,000 bond here tonight, while Federal, State and local authorities strove to decide where to bring him to trial on one or more of many charges of robbery and murder.

Dalhover, who once swore the Brady gunmen would "make Dillinger look like a piker," late today was returned to Indiana, the State in which he started his crime career. He arrived in custody of Myron Gurnea, Federal agent, who led the Bangor (Me.) raid Tuesday, which left dead Dalhover's pals, Al Brady and Clarence Lee Shaffer, jr.

U. S. Always Will Help Britain, Babson Avers

Bristol, England, Oct. 14 (AP).—Roger Babson, American economist, told the Congregational Union Assembly today that "if Britain needed any help to defend civilization America would always send men, money and goods." Speaking as moderator general of the Council of Congregational Churches of America, he said all American Congregationalists, regardless of their political beliefs, are 100 per cent behind President Roosevelt's Chicago address on peace.

Police Judge I. R. Hitt Plans Private Practice

Former Judge Isaac R. Hitt, "grand old man" of Police Court here for many years, yesterday announced he planned to enter private law practice, following retirement from the bench several weeks ago. He was succeeded by Judge Hobart Newman.

Judge Hitt said he had engaged offices in the Executive Building at 503 F street northwest. He was on the Police Court bench for approximately 20 years.

Steamfitters' Capitol Strike Will Be Settled

Conference Fails to Reach Accord, But Union Will Vote on Proposal.

A quick settlement of the steamfitters strike now in progress on the Capitol's air-conditioning system was promised yesterday by John M. Botts, union representative.

Meeting at Architect Lynn's office yesterday, the trade union representatives conferring with Lynn failed to negotiate a complete settlement.

A proposition offered by Lynn could not be agreed upon, Botts stated. However, certain agreements, which could not be released, will be considered at a union meeting this morning, Botts said.

"In all probability," he said, "our meeting will result in another conference with Architect Lynn, and the strike will be settled."

In the meantime, Lynn explained that everything will be in order at the Capitol and Senate and House Office Buildings for the special session.

Additional painters were put to work at the Capitol yesterday to supply the finishing touches and cleaners were busy tidying up the building.

Elevators in the building are undergoing repairs and should be completed by next week, Lynn's office stated.

Everson to Yield Farm Leadership

Huron, S. Dak., Oct. 14 (AP).—E. H. Everson, prominent in the National Farmers Union for 20 years and its president since 1934, announced tonight that he would not seek re-election at the union's convention next month in Oklahoma City. He told the State convention of the Farmers Union last night that Roosevelt Administration policies were placing farmers in a "veritable straitjacket," while giving full protection to consumers.

Observe Co-Workers, Teacher Group Is Told

Dr. Chester W. Holmes, principal of Anacostia Junior High School, told a recent meeting of the Junior High School Teachers Association that members would have an opportunity during the school year to observe classroom practice of their fellow teachers. He advised teachers confronted with difficult individual cases to employ a physician's methods of diagnosis.

Keith Johnson reported on the recent N. E. A. convention which he attended as District delegate. Six members of the association were elected to Dr. Frank Ballou's advisory council.

Hearing Set for Youth Charged With Slaying

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—William Blanton, 18-year-old high school senior, charged with murder after Eugene Southerland, 31, died from the effects of a blow received last week during a fight at a filling station, will be given preliminary hearing at Bowling Green next Wednesday.

Commonwealth's Attorney Bernard H. Mahon, of Caroline, said Blanton had been released on $5,000 bond pending the preliminary hearing.

Debaters to Meet.

The newly chosen debating squad of the Young Men's Christian Association will hold its first meeting at 9 p. m. today in the Central "Y" building, 1736 G street. Members of the squad are Lester E. Hurt and John C. Kelley, members of last year's debating team; Eugene Barnwell, Kenneth R. Baumbusch, William J. Davis and Paul Kanstoroom. Teams will be chosen from the squad, from time to time, to represent the "Y" in debate.

6 Ex-Policemen Freed in Tampa Flogging Death

Judge Directs Acquittal Verdict; State Fails to Link Defendants

By the Associated Press.

Bartow, Fla., Oct. 14.—Judge Robert T. Dewell today directed a verdict of acquittal for six former Tampa policemen charged with second degree murder after a triple flogging in Tampa two years ago.

The judge's ruling immediately freed the six defendants, five of whom were convicted of kidnaping one of the three flogging victims but who won a supreme court order for a new trial.

Judge Dewell held the State failed to prove the six former officers were present at the scene of the floggings and failed to show by direct evidence that they had a part in abducting the victims.

Joseph E. Shoemaker, Eugene F. Poulnot and Sam Rogers were beaten after attending a meeting of the Modern Democrats, a third party political unit formed for a city election campaign in Tampa. Shoemaker died of his injuries.

The defendants were Sam Crosby, F. W. Switzer, C. A. Brown, jr., C. W. Carlisle, John P. Bridges and Arlie Gilliam.

D.C. Woman Nominated As Head of Girl Scouts

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 14 (AP).—The nominating committee of the National Council of Girl Scouts today offered the name of Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, of Washington, D. C., for president, succeeding Mrs. Herbert Hoover, whose term expires.

Radio in Car Is Stolen Before Police Station

The radio in the automobile of James L. Hospitalhorn, of 618 I street northwest, was stolen as his car was parked in the shadow of police headquarters, he reported yesterday.

Hospitalhorn, who valued the radio at $25, said he parked his car for the night at John Marshall place and Pennsylvania avenue.

When he came to get the car, he discovered the radio had been stolen.

Hygiene Group Scores Lack of Venereal Staff

Treatments at Lorton and Occoquan Urged by R. H. Everett.

Lack of facilities for hospitalization of venereal disease cases and the shortage of medical personnel at Lorton Reformatory and Occoquan Workhouse were criticized yesterday by the District Social Hygiene Society.

"Neither at Gallinger Hospital nor at most of the city's private hospitals are beds made available for sufferers from syphilis, even in cases where physicians are willing to certify that hospitalization is essential," said Dr. H. H. Hazen, president of the society.

Pointing to the shortage of medical service at Lorton and Occoquan, as outlined recently by Ray L. Huff, superintendent of District penal institutions, Secretary Ray H. Everett said:

"Many of the prisoners return to the District to live at the expiration of their sentences. Both for their own health protection and for that of the community those suffering from syphilis and gonorrhea should receive adequate treatment while in these institutions.

"These treatments should be continued by the District health services after the prisoner's release in cases where cure has not been attained."

Dr. Russell H. Fields, chairman of the medical measures committee, outlined an extensive health education program for the coming year. Widespread use will be made of United States Public Health Service posters, talking slide films, pamphlets and lectures.

Capital Sculptor, Succumbs to Car Accident Injuries

Victim of an automobile collision Monday at T. B., Md., Emil Jung, 60, of 1426 Oak street northwest, died in Casualty Hospital.

Services will be held tomorrow at 2 at the S. H. Hines Co. funeral home. Interment will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Jung, who was born in Strasbourg, Alsace, was an ornamental sculptor. He had designed pieces for numerous governmental structures, including the eagles atop the flagpoles on Constitution avenue and a carved seal of the District of Columbia on a District building at Blue Plains.

Many postoffices throughout the country have examples of Mr. Jung's artistry in their lamps, tables and other sculptured ornaments. The postoffice dedicated this week at Poughkeepsie by President Roosevelt will contain some of his work.

Mr. Jung was a member of Arminius Lodge, No. 25, F. A. A. M., and of the Concord Club. He had been a resident of Washington since 1900.

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Lillian Jung; a daughter, Mrs. Emily Jung Cooper, and a son, Ashton Calvert Timmons.

Comedy Rules 2d Round of Play Tourney

3 More Dramas Offered at Roosevelt High; Casts Excellent.

The muse of comedy again held sway in the second round of the preliminary contests of the One-act Play tournament at Roosevelt High last evening.

Opening the bill was Lord Dunsany's comedy, "Atalanta in Wimbledon," presented by the Players Club of Central Community Theater, and directed by Yvonne Levy Kushner. It is a story of a bachelor girl of 26, who is disgruntled at her lack of suitors and imbued with notions of romantic fulfillment. The entire cast was excellent, their English accents being particularly consistent and pleasing, and Jack Rollins was especially convincing as the gardener.

Arthur Rhodes, director of the Troupers of East Washington Community Center, scored again with his production of "The Weak Spot," by George Kelly. The playlet, based on superstitious beliefs, proved amusing fare. Carolyn Rogers, as the clairvoyant dry goods purveyor, was the high spot of this half hour's entertainment, with Olga Dryden, as the tearful wife, running a close second. William Wilton did his usual smooth piece of work in the role of husband.

Completing the trio was the Wigs and Queues Dramatic Club's presentation of "Smoke Screen," by Robert Kasper. This was directed by Lena G. Parks. This drama was the only note of gloom in the program, and the fault is with the play rather than with the players. June Pyne, as the girl, Barron Shields, as the copper, and Jack Heather as the "hophead," carried the action.

Glenn Frank Talks In Capital Tonight

The Washington Board of Trade will hear an address by Dr. Glenn Frank, former president of the University of Wisconsin, at its first general meeting of the fall in the Willard Hotel tonight.

About 1,500 members of the organization are expected to attend the gathering which will begin at 8 o'clock. Col. Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, will speak in behalf of the Red Cross. The board's stand on fiscal affairs of the District will be discussed by Edgar Morris, chairman of the municipal finance committee.

Senator Townsend, Representative Bloom, the District Commissioners, Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business; Robert Woods Bliss, former ambassador to Argentina; John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee; Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools heads of local universities and many other Government, civic and business leaders will be among the board's guests.

Dr. Frank will discuss the "workable economics of plenty."

McNinch Removes 3 Officials In Opening Clean-up of FCC

He said elimination of the divisions had the unavoidable consequence of removing their directors as "under the language of the statute there is unfortunately no provision for their continuance in their present capacity."

McNinch added he would be glad to recommend any of them for any Government job "for which they can qualify," or give them preferential consideration for any commission job now or hereafter open, if they "meet the requirements."

Clean-Up Only Started.

That McNinch has only started wielding the broom in the office he took over at President Roosevelt's request a fortnight ago was apparent, and friends said he would wield it without regard to political considerations, and without fear or favor.

Unofficially, it was said at the commission that the three jobs were "supernumerary," that their functions had been performed adequately, but few duties had been assigned them by the commission.

It was also pointed out in one quarter that a net saving of $30,000 may result from the move, and the commission is under White House injunction to reduce expenses 10 per cent. Each job is understood to have carried a $7,500 salary, with an added $2,500 for secretarial help.

Killeen, broadcast division director, was formerly editor of a Bronx newspaper, and a friend of Edward J. Flynn, Democratic leader of the Bronx, as well as of Farley. Patterson, of the telephone division, aided Black in his airmail investigation, and Bartley was reputed to have had the backing of Rayburn while House Interstate Commerce chairman.

It was following threat of a Senate investigation of the Communications Commission that President Roosevelt transferred McNinch from the Power Commission. T. A. M. Craven, former chief engineer, was elevated to commission membership to help. Craven, experienced in radio and communications practices, was to furnish counsel, while McNinch swung the whip, reports said.

McNinch said the abolition of divisions was fully discussed and concurred in by all members of the commission.

"To subdivide a small commission," he said, "has a divisive effect and tends away from co-operation and mutual understanding."

Although the divisions theoretically were composed of three members, he said they functioned in fact with two members because of impracticability of the chairman (an ex-officio member) keeping currently informed and attending meetings.

Better to Work as Unit.

This, he added, "has resulted in two members of the commission carrying an unnecessary load of responsibility and exercising an undesirably large portion of the power and functions of the commission, while at the same time denying the other commissioners any practical opportunity to participate in decisions."

He declared each two division members were denied opportunity to exchange views and free discussion of opinions with other commissioners, and "commissioners not on a particular division have felt a natural reluctance to inquire into the work committed to others."

A commission functioning as a unit, he said, will co-operate more effectively, give "rounded development" to every commissioner's knowledge, and make "a real start toward functioning co-operatively and much more effectively."

McNinch, who has become Roosevelt's Administration "trouble shooter," said the commission is maintaining a neutral attitude toward the investigation proposed by Senator Wallace H. White (Republican), of Maine, and favorably reported by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

Regarding charges of a "mess" in the commission, McNinch told reporters two weeks ago that "where there is so much smoke there must be some fire," but yesterday said he had not had opportunity to look beneath the "smoke."

Members Assigned.

He said Commissioner George Henry Payne was elected chairman of the telegraph division, to serve until that unit is abolished November 15. Payne had been acting chairman since Commissioner Irvin Stewart retired in June. Craven was named temporarily to assist Payne.

Chairman of the broadcast division, which will be abolished next month, has been Eugene O. Sykes, a Coolidge appointee and carryover from the old Radio Commission. Norman S. Case, former Republican Governor of Rhode Island, and friend of Roosevelt, was second member of the broadcast division.

Commissioner Paul A. Walker is chairman of the telephone division, also to be abolished, and Commissioner Thad H. Brown is second member of the division. Although the telephone unit will be dissolved, McNinch said Walker was directed by resolution to supervise completion of the division's telephone investigation, so a report can be made to the next Congress.

Clerks, Meat Men Attend A.F.L. Rally

Clerks and meat cutters of grocery and meat companies met last night at Pythian Temple, 1012 Ninth street northwest, in an organization meeting called by officials of the American Federation of Labor. Approximately 400 persons were present, filling the hall to capacity.

Aimed to encourage company employes to join the Retail Clerks International Protective Association and the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workers of North America, the rally was addressed by local and national leaders.

Among the speakers were the chairman, Charles B. McCloskey, vice president of the Washington Central Labor Union; Paul Topping, A. F. L. organizer for the District and Northern Virginia; R. M. Coulter, A. F. L. organizer; Norman W. Barbour, business agent of Local 262, Retail Clerks' Protective Association, and William A. Metro, secretary of Local 493, Meat Cutters' Union.

Take Your Pick Do not Delay

THESE books are more than best sellers. They are carefully selected titles which have made permanent places for themselves through quality of their contents.

By special arrangements with the publisher, we are able to offer you these well-known editions at unusual savings. Many of them sold in their original editions for $5 to $10 (one at $15.) These are NOT second-hand books, remainders or "Publisher's Overstock." They are BRAND NEW, editions of books you have always wanted to own. Every volume is complete and unabridged, beautifully printed from large easily read type on quality paper. Many are illustrated in both full color and black and white. They are large library size, running up to 8¼ to 11¼ inches, handsomely bound in specially selected cloth or sturdy buckram stamped in gilt.

The unusual savings offered here are made possible first, by the success of these books at their original prices; second, by the use of the plates from which higher priced editions in quantities were made; third, by the manufacture of large quantities by the most modern printing and binding methods. The savings are passed on to you.

Check this list carefully and find the books you want at savings of 1-3 to 3-4 of the original prices.

9-Power Parley Will End War, Woodrum Says

Va. Representative Indorses Roosevelt 'Search for Peace.'

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 14.—Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Roanoke, in an addres here tonight, added his support to President Roosevelt's peace program through international negotiation and predicted definite results from the Nine-Power Conference to end the present disturbance in China.

Speaking before the Roanoke Rotary Club, Woodrum declared that the United States must "go forward with a steady, orderly and progressive strengthening of her military establishment on the seas, on land and in the air, so that at all times she may not only be willing but ready and able to defend her traditions and protect her citizens and their property."

Referring to the Nine-Power Conference to which China and Japan will be invited, Woodrum predicted that out of the conference "will come a formula that will end this awful carnage in which countless thousands of innocent, defenseless women and children are being sacrificed upon the altar of greed and power. The genius, the statesmanship, the political and economic prestige of America will be used in that conference and will contribute largely to the result of that 'search for peace,'" he said.

"There must not be another world conflagration," Woodrum declared, urging that "some means must be found to check the mad march of this arrogant imperialism that defies all international law; that ignores the protests of great nations; and that refuses to recognize or abide by its solemn obligations and promises."

He asserted that America will participate in the Nine-Power Conference "in accord with our traditions, as a great democracy boasting a great heritage of liberty and freedom."

Roosevelt Accused Of 'Exaggerating' National Poverty

President Roosevelt was accused last night of over-emphasizing poverty to such an extent that Amercians are apt to think the Nation lives in a veritable poorhouse. In a speech before more than 100 members of the University Club, Albert W. Atwood, author and former magazine editor, said his studies had failed to disclose much evidence in support of the generally accepted conclusion that two per cent of the country's residents control 60 per cent of its wealth. Speaking on "Concentration of Wealth," he admitted its existence, but claimed its extent has been exaggerated.

Relatives and oversized doctors' bills plague most wealthy men, Atwood said. If a rich man, he declared, uses his wealth unwisely he is rewarded with misery, and if he uses it wisely he reaps cares and worries.

The address was the first in a series of educational talks sponsored by the club's entertainment committee.

25-Cent Book Urged As Movie Competition

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Mass production of books to keep the 25-cent trade home from the movies in the evening was advocated today by Hervey Allen, author of that weighty best-seller in the $3 class, "Anthony Adverse."

Returning on the liner Europa from conferences abroad with publishers and translators, Allen said. "Every writer and every publisher has to compete with the movies. A person spends 25 cents to go to a picture and $3 for a book. We should reach that 25-cent crowd not only in what we write but also in the prices for books."

Mother of President Is Sued for $100,000

White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 13 (AP).—A damage suit for $100,000 against Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, and her chauffeur, Louis E. Depew, was disclosed in Supreme Court today.

The plaintiff, Frederick Grewen, formerly a glove dealer, alleged he was struck by Mrs. Roosevelt's car in New York April 3. Mrs. Roosevelt was not in the car.

Episcopalians Declare Bishop Temporal Head

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Oct. 14.—The Protestant Episcopal Church tonight made the presiding bishop its supreme spiritual and temporal authority.

Already the spiritual leader, he will receive the administrative authority by elevation to the presidency of the church's national council or board of directors.

In its triennial general convention, the church also created the positions of first and second vice presidents for the council, and provided that when the head of a diocese is made presiding bishop he shall "relinquish the administration of his diocese sufficiently to enable him to perform his duties as presiding bishop."

Expansion of the presiding bishop's powers was confirmed by the House of Deputies. The measures were returned to the House of Bishops for concurrence in minor amendments. The deputies disagreed with the bishops' proposal to extend the six-year term of the presiding bishop so that it would expire after he reached the age of 70. The deputies made the retirement age 68.

The bishops again postponed, until Saturday, the election of a successor to the Right Rev. James DeWolf Perry, of Rhode Island, the present presiding bishop.

Waiter Is Held To Grand Jury In Harris Death

Victim's Brother Testifies Threats Preceded Cafe Shooting.

Burly Louis J. Tapponnier, 27-year-old waiter, was held to the grand jury yesterday by a coroner's jury in connection with the fatal shooting Tuesday of William Harris.

Harris died at Casualty Hospital Wednesday.

James Harris, 29, who was with his brother at the time o fthe shooting, and who also was struck by a bullet, told the jury Tapponnier entered a Ninth street cafeteria early Tuesday morning and shot at four men eating breakfast.

According to Harris, the fight resulted from an all-night drinking party.

D. C. Trade Board Issues Handbook

What the Washington Board of Trade has accomplished in 46 years of service and some of the problems now interesting its 4,000 members are sketched in a new handbook entitled "Working for Washington."

Installation of underground trolleys for street railways, reclamation of Anacostia flats, codification of District laws, establishment of a 50-50 basis of fiscal relationship between Federal and District governments, formulation of original zoning laws, higher pay and retirement fund for teachers are a few of the outstanding achievements of the board listed in the pamphlet.

Current tax and budget problems are explained in the booklet, and the board reiterates its stand against any increase over the $46,000,000 budget.

Civic Unit Opposes Non-D. C. Students

Opposition to the law permitting nonresidents to send their children to District schools developed at the meeting of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association Wednesday night at the Woodridge Library. A resolution, considered by the association, would amend the present law to limit use of city schools to children of members of Congress, the diplocatic corps and the military. Final action was deferred until the next meeting.

Congress Faces Bitter Fight on Arms Shipment

Report of $81,829,527 in Sales Intensifies the Neutrality Issue.

By the Associated Press.

Prospects for a hard fight over neutrality legislation in the coming session of Congress appeared yesterday to have been increased by a State Department report that it licensed $81,829,527 of munitions exports in the past two years.

Some of the legislators are prepared to contend that the neutrality law should be tightened to prevent the United States from shipping any arms abroad so long as this country is at peace.

At present the law forbids such shipments only to nations which President Roosevelt proclaims to be engaged in a foreign war.

Powerful forces, in Congress and out, stand ready to oppose a more general ban. Some military experts, for instance, contend foreign business is necessary to maintain American arms plants at the levels that would be required in war-time for national defense. Their view is opposed by several members of the old Senate Munitions Committee, who argue the advantage gained by foreign support of American plants is more than offset by the additional military power it places in foreign hands.

Only Spain, torn by civil warfare, is barred entirely at present from buying war implements in the United States.

President Roosevelt has refrained from invoking the arms and loans bans of the neutrality act against China and Japan, on the grounds that there has been no formal declaration of war between them. He has, however, prohibited Government-owned ships to carry weapons to the Far Eastern belligerents, and has warned other shipping that if it handles such business it will do so at its own risk.

In the two years the State Department has been requiring and listing export licenses, at the behest of Congress, China has been the best foreign customer of American arms dealers, with Soviet Russia a close second.

China placed munitions and aviation orders totaling $13,605,190.

In the same period, $2,343,245 of such exports to Japan were licensed.

Only last month, the United States sanctioned the shipment of more than $10,000,000 in war material to Russia. There have been unconfirmed reports that this was the forerunner of larger orders of armor plate and big guns for one or more battleships the Moscow government is planning.

Another subject which may stir controversy when Congress reconvenes is Secretary Hull's proposal to lease six decommissioned naval destroyers to Brazil for training purposes. To dispose of Government property in this way requires special legislation, approval of which the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had not yet given when Congress adjourned.

Dog Seizes Pants, Policeman Wins Conflict Anyhow

It all started when Precinct Detective Joseph P. Comiskey stood guard at the rear exit of a colored poolroom in the first block of M street southwest while Detective Sergt. Howard Ogle and Lieut. Clement Cox questioned the patrons.

A 185-pound Negro tried to leave by the back door. Comiskey blocked the way. A moment later fists began to uy, Comiskey outweighing his opponent by 5 pounds. Forty-five pounds of the detective's weight, however, consisted of a large mongrel dog which attached itself to the seat of his trousers.

In the resulting melee the colored man got the .worst of the battle and the dog suddenly disappeared. At the Fourth Precinct Station the prisoner gave his name as Clarence Bundy, 31, first block of M street southwest. He is charged with disorderly conduct and assault on an officer.

The dog has not been seen since.

'Get-Rich-Quick' Firm's Books Seized by Police

Boston, Oct. 14 (AP).—A temporary receiver took charge today of the Boston Discount Corporation and police held the books of the concern in an effort to force a test of the legality of what authorities termed a "get-rich-quick" plan.

Attorney General James J. Ronan started investigation of the corporation several days ago when crowds began to throng its downtown office seeking to make an investment of $5.95 in "discount coupons" on the possibility of pyramiding that sum to $640.

Theft in Church.

A diamond ring, valued at $200, was stolen from Mrs. Dyer, 121 Twelfth street southeast, while at early mass yesterday, she reported to police. Mrs. Dyer said the ring was in her handbag, which she laid beside her on the pew of an East Capitol street church. The bag also contined personal papers and a small amount of cash, she stated.

Canadian Pays Roosevelt Good Neighbor Visit

Pattullo, B. C. Premier, at Hyde Park; Hull to Go to Ottawa.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Another link in the long chain of "good neighbor" visits exchanged between American and Canadian officials was welded here late today with a call on President Roosevelt by T. D. Pattullo, premier of British Columbia.

The western Canadian provincial head, who has been visiting in the East, went to the temporary White House for tea at the invitation of the President.

He was one of Mr. Roosevelt's hosts on the latter's recent trip from Seattle to Victoria, B. C., where an official luncheon was served.

The President, who daclared last Friday in amplication of his Chicago speech that "affirmative" action must be taken to restore world peace, has frequently suggested Canadian-American friendliness as a worthy example for militaristic nations to follow.

The premier's call will be followed next week by a visit to Ottawa and Toronto by Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Mrs. Hull.

Pattullo arrived here from New York after the Chief Executive had put in a day on mail and a study of departmental reports and suggestions in connection with the special session of Congress meeting a month from tomorrow.

These documents, principally from the Agriculture and Labor departments, are being persued for information on which to base a Presidential message outlining reasons for the five-point legislative program that will be recommended for the extra session.

Bad Checks Kept Sons in College, D.C. Woman Says

A mother, who said she was driven to cash a bad check in order to keep her two sons in college, was arrested and charged with false pretenses yesterday.

She said she is Mrs. Ruby Baldwin, 48, of 212 Eighth street northeast. She was seized on a warrant obtained by a Connecticut avenue florist in connection with an allegedly bad check for $15, which she gave him in payment for flowers. She received $12 change from the check, he charged.

Mrs. Baldwin, police asserted, claims to be heiress to about $200,000 worth of property near Havre de Grace, Md., which at present is tied up in litigation.

Last night she was released under $300 bond.

Rev. Mr. Rohrer Again to Head Mission Council

Mr. Anderson to Represent the Congregation of Central Union.

Central Union Mission yesterday announced re-election of the Rev. Freeley Rohrer, of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, as president of its ministerial council. Appointment of the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson as the Congregational representative also was made public.

The Rev. Dr. Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church, succeeds the Rev. A. A. Stockdale.

Other officers for 1937-38 are the Rev. Gove G. Johnson, vice president, and the Rev. George M. Cummings, secretary.

Mrs. William H. Ramsey, president; Mrs. John S. Bennett, first vice president; Mrs. Caroline B. Stephen, second vice president; Mrs. Hilda Belt, recording secretary; Mrs. H. L. Brunson, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Marion P. Lord, treasurer.

New officers of the guild's evening auxiliary, which is composed of business and professional women, are Miss Charlotte Darrow, president; Miss Edna Fussell, vice president; Miss Mary Terrell, recording secretary; Miss Sue Frazier, corresponding secretary, and Miss Jessie L. Rentz, treasurer.

Election of Harry Hoskinson as treasurer of Central Union Mission, succeeding the late Jackson A. Winner, also was announced. Arthur G. Bishop was named to the vacancy on the board of directors caused by Mr. Winner's death.

Wife Thinks Nijinsky Will Regain His Sanity

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Hope that Vaslav Nijinsky, famed Russian ballet dancer, now 45 years old and for 17 years a patient in a Swiss sanitarium, may regain his mental balance was expressed today by his wife, Mme. Romala Nijinsky.

Arriving here on the liner Europa for a lecture tour, she said that on her return Viennese physicians would begin a series of "insulin shock" injections in an effort to restore his health. If he recovers, Mme. Nijinsky said, she wishes him to organize a ballet school and not return to the stage.

Making the grade

Every thoughtful mother recognizes this fact . . . mothers know too that children need help to build and maintain blood strength.

Particularly is this true with those who have suffered some illness or who look pale . . . tire easily . . . are underweight . . . or have lost their zest for food.

S.S.S. Tonic helps build Sturdy Health

S.S.S. Tonic is especially designed to build-up children's health through the red-blood-cells, thus putting them in better condition to enjoy the food they eat and to regain lost weight . . . all which make for greater strength and vitality.

Full directions are on each bottle of S.S.S. Tonic, which comes in two convenient sizes. The larger size at a saving in price.

Help your child to "make the grade" by starting him or her on a course of S.S.S. Tonic now. There is no substitute for this time-tested remedy and no ethical druggist will suggest something "just as good."

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 14.—Edward L. Norwood, 60-year-old resident of Hyattstown, Montgomery county, was in serious condition at the Frederick City Hospital today from injuries received last night when struck by an automobile while walking along the Frederick-Washington highway in Hyattstown.

Operator of the machine was said by State Police to be Francis J. Cook, 6301 Sixteenth street northwest, Washington. Norwood has a possible concussion of the brain in addition to injuries to his head and arm. Cook was released under $100 bond pending oucome of the man's injuries.

Destroyer Accepted

The 1,500-ton destroyer, Ralph Talbot, built at a cost of $4,000,000, was commissioned yesterday at the Boston, Mass., Navy Yard. The vessel was named for Ralph Talbot, an aviator who was killed in France during the World War.

Postman Denies Robbing Mails, $500 Bail Fixed

Arthur W. Minor, 24, colored postman, was held in $500 bail when he pleaded not guilty before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage to a charge of robbing the United States mails. Postal Inspector Lee de Waard said that he traced marked money, taken from the mails, to Minor, and found the bills in the latter's shoes.

Sailor Held in Slaying Of Girl at Tourist Cabin

Brunswick, Ga., Oct. 14 (AP).—Glynn County police questioned a sailor today in the death of an 18-year-old girl whose bruised body was found in a tourist cabin.

The sailor, who said he was Fred Fannin, 30, of Oklahoma City, was arrested in Jacksonville, Fla. Officer J. T. Erwin, of Jacksonville, said Fannin told him he spent Tuesday night with the girl, listed as Miss Corrine Durden.

Baltimore Patrolman Found Shot to Death

Baltimore, Oct. 14 (AP).—Charles S. Ely, Baltimore patrolman, identified today by relatives as a member of the second Byrd Antarctic expedition, died from bullet wounds while riding in a taxicab.

Dr. Cornelius Hamm, coroner, ordered an investigation.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Thoughts

Now here are some sweet thoughts, which we found in our mail box last night. The missive was signed by "The Committee Against Government Employe Strikes," which occurs to us as something new. The missive:

"Apropos of the recent article in your column quoting Jacob Baker's statements in Ottawa, Canada, we have the following questions bothering ourselves and other Government employes:

1. Can the Government employe accept the assurances of Mr. Baker that his C. I. O. affiliate will not strike or picket against the Government when we take into account the fact that (a) Baker was appointed by Lewis instead of being elected by his union; and (b) therefore his tenure of office is uncertain; and (c) who has no constitution with tenets to bind his members against strikes and picketing; and (d) who, therefore, cannot speak for the actions of his members?

2. Would the Government employe not feel better assured if Mr. Baker's employer, Mr. John L. Lewis, made a statement that he forbade strikes and picketing among all Federal Governmental employes and assured the public that he would enforce this edict by setting an example in industry by living up to his contracts with employers?

Notes

And as the above is very provocative of some profound thought—and profound thinking being a burdensome thing—the column passes on to you some light notes to be skimmed over:

The Bureau of Fisheries makes known that Capt. Lin Jorgensen, of the U. S. F. S. Crane discovered an ancient bone doll on the Alaskan coast. The doll was buried some four feet under ground, and of it Dr. A. Hrdlicka, of the Smithsonian, says:

"The specimen at hand is the front part of the head and of the torso of a doll. It is made of hard bone, is undoubtedly of respectable age (that is, pre-Russian, perhaps several hundred years) and was made by the pre-Russian natives of the islands from which it comes. In some ways it is an especially nice specimen. It has four openings in the face, two on the cheek bone and two on the lower lip, which in all probability were inlaid with shell or some other substance . . . ."

Woss Dept.

The I. D. R. A. News declares that, "without the dreamers and idealists, practical affairs would go for naught." And in the sequence, it invites Interior's people to submit poems for publication. Now the road of the poet is hard at best; the climb to the heights is tough. And we would be the last to confound the efforts of the least. But from long experience one thought becomes compelling and we pass it to Editor Samuel M. Barrett for what it may be worth. The moment you print one poem you've got to print 1,000. That's all.

Did you know that the Weather Bureau pays $3 each for return of the upper-air sounding instruments? But as far as we know, none of this particular sort has been sent up hereabouts. Some were recently sent aloft from the four stations in the South and Southeast. The operation is something after this fashion: After the balloons burst—about 10 miles up—the sounding devices which automatically record temperature, pressure and humidity in the air, drop back to earth, the fall broken by a protecting framework of bamboo sticks. Attention is attracted to the instruments by red streamers that are attached. Finders and returners get $3.

War-Spawned Plague in China Menaces World

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Oct. 14.—A picture of China devastated by terrible plagues—that might spread throughout the world—as a result of the Sino-Japanese war was described today to the League of Nations committee on technical co-operation with China.

League medical experts told the committee an international epidemic of cholera, pneumonic plague (the black death), typhus and various fevers was possible if the continuance of the conflict should break down China's quarantine service.

The interruption of the service would almost certainly, it was said, lead to the transmission of such diseases by ships across the seas.

But even if that peril were checked, the people of China still would face large-scale epidemics if military operations go on during the winter.

The experts asserted cholera was spreading actively now due to the movements of refugees and troops.

The medical experts also declared considerable shift in the population might cause an outbreak of smallpox, meningitis, diphtheria, scarlet fever and other diseases.

Dr. Victor Hu Chi Tsai, Chinese Minister to Switzerland, asked the committee to send antiepidemic units into Shensi, Hupei, Kiangsu, Kiangsi nad Kwangtung provinces without delay.

driven European powers toward a showdown on a long-brewing crisis, will be taken up Saturday before an emergency session of the executive group of the London nonintervention committee.

50,000 Sent to Libya.

Rome, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Three more troop ships sailed from Naples for Libya today, bringing to nearly 50,000 the number dispatched in the last two weeks for reinforcement of Italy's North African garrisons because of "international complications."

Three other convoys sailed yesterday from Naples, and it was indicated Premier Mussolini soon would have 100,000 troops along the Libyan frontiers facing French Tunisia and British Egypt.

Many Fascists believed the dispatch of the troops was connected with France's efforts to persuade Great Britain to join her in a "peaceful occupation" of the Spanish Balearic Island of Minorca as a means of offsetting Italian occupation of neighboring Majorca. Fascist leaders said the Majorca occupation was "temporary."

France May Recognize Franco.

Paris, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—The French government, submitting to a British plea for "cool heads," promised tonight to grant belligerent rights to both the Spanish insurgents and loyalists if Premier Mussolini shows good faith by recalling "volunteers" from Spain.

'People's Envoy' Sails From Nippon for U. S.

Tokyo, Oct. 14 (AP).—Kojiro Matsukata, Japan's "people's envoy" to America, sailed today aboard the steamer Tatsuta Maru. Baron Kishichiro Okura and Vice Admiral Takuo Godoh, who are going to Italy and Germany, respectively, also were aboard. All plan to explain "Japan's position" in the Far Eastern situation.

Smiths Island Traffic Consists of 6 Vehicles

Princess Anne, Md., Oct. 14 (AP).—The Smiths Island traffic count is over—there are, by actual count, three automobiles, two trucks, one horse and wagon on the Chesapeake Bay isle.

Chief Engineer Nathan L. Smith, of the State roads commission, directed the traffic count to determine the need of road construction on the island.

Jews Regaining Power In Germany, Paper Says

Berlin, Oct. 14 (AP).—Das Schwarze Korps, organ of Storm Troopers, declared today that Jews are regaining power in Germany "by way of the back stairs."

The paper blamed "German thorough objectivity" which fails to detect "Jewish camouflaging methods" in regaining influence in business life with the aid of "Aryan associates." It urged application of present laws and declared that the excuse of "indispensable" Jewish business is no longer valid.

Duce to Make War 'Delightful' To His 'Baby Citizen Soldiers'

Military Training Will Be 'Pleasant Diversion' to School Children; Movies of Heroes to Rouse 'Warrior Spirit' in Young.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Oct. 14.—Development of "citizen soldiers" became the announced objective of the Italian education system tonight with publication in the official Gazette of a new law outlining military training courses for public schools.

The preamble to the law says the purpose of the program is not so much to provide technical military instruction as "to feed, reinforce and render conscious in youth the military spirit which today is one of its best characteristics."

Instructors were told to make military training "instructive and at the same time delightful, with the object of seeing that it is considered by students as a pleasant diversion, a precious element of their own cultural patrimony and an indispensable requisite for fulfilling their duty to the Fascist fatherland."

The decree provided three grades of military instruction—informative, formative and higher instruction.

In the first course instructors were ordered to avoid any unpleasant forcing of their subject. They were told to resort to paintings, motion pictures and similar means for making the studies pleasing to children.

"Sober and efficacious exaltation of heroes of recent wars, directed at their sentiments, will go a long way to arouse the warrior spirit among the youngest children," the decree said.

As students approach the age of military service they can, in the second grade of their studies, be given more profound instruction, it added.

In the third phase youths are to be given knowledge of a political-military character.

Quezon Hails Fathers.

Manila, Oct. 14 (AP).—Equal rights for fathers were recognized today by President Manuel Quezon when he abolished Mother's Day and created Parents' Day, the first Monday of December.

Shells Kill 100 In Settlement; Americans Hit

Fire Rakes Foreign Areas; Bodies Litter Streets; Chinese Advance.

offensive was repulsed after "several hundred Chinese were killed."

The battle, which lasted nearly 15 hours, started yesterday afternoon when Chinese snipers, intrenched along the Pootung waterfront, began to rake the decks of a Japanese patrol boat on the Settlement side of the river.

A Japanese destroyer moved up and began shelling the Hungshing engineering works, where the snipers were hidden. One shell apparently ricochoting off the stone abutment of the wharf, splintered and its fragments showered the Augusta.

Japanese guns shelled the Chinese sections of the city for more than an hour. Airplanes bombed positions near the Settlement.

One bomb struck a streetcar in the Settlement, reportedly killing 50 persons. Another exploded near the Marine lines on the edge of the American defense sector. The concussion bowled over Marines who were on duty.

By dusk the fighting had quieted. Then suddenly it broke out again on the Chinese side. Every Chinese battery in Pootung and Chapei seemed to have opened fire simultaneously.

Shells dropped into the Settlement and foreigners and Chinese in the foreign area took to cover. Japanese opened an equally furious artillery bombardment.

The Chinese appeared to have planned the mass assault. Their land forces moved forward and a squadron of Chinese planes, apparently arriving from Nanking, began to drone over Japanese sections and also over the foreign areas of the Settlement.

High overhead the lights of the planes winked, and the Japanese opened fire with anti-aircraft batteries, the shells scattering over the native quarters and foreign zone alike.

The planes apparently were a decoy, as other Chinese planes, flying without lights, suddenly dropped bombs on the Japanese lines in Hongkew.

Infiesto, industrial town southwest of Arriondas, was subjected to a furious air attack which left large areas in ruins. Dispatches said infiesto was one of the principal insurgent objectives.

Impending transfer of Franco's headquarters from Salamanca to San Sebastian, on the Biscayan coast near the Franco-Spanish border, was disclosed by insurgent officers. The move was said to be intended to permit Franco to direct a major offensive against Catalonia.

Congressmen in Spain.

Valencia, Spain, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—United States Representatives John T. Bernard (Farmer-Labor), of Minsota, and Jerry J. O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana, the latter with his bride, arrived here late today during a terrific air raid, to investigate "Fascist intervention" in the civil war.

At least 10 persons were killed and 20 wounded when four insurgent bombers raided the loyalist naval base at Cartagena before sweeping over Valencia at 6:30 p. m.

Bernard and O'Connell plan to travel through loyalist Spain, interviewing Italian and German prisoners of war, and will give Congress their report when they return to Washington.

R. V. Johnson, Poet, Ex-Envoy To Italy, Dead

Director of Hall of Fame at New York University Passes in 85th Year.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 14.—Robert Underwood Johnson, editor, noted as a poet and former Ambassador to Italy, died today in his eighty-fifth year.

The former Ambassador, appointed by Woodrow Wilson, had been director of the New York University Hall of Fame since 1919, and had served as editor of Century Magazine.

He had just returned from a visit with his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Owen Johnson, at Stockbridge, Mass. Besides his son, Owen, Mr. Johnson is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Agnes Johnson Holden, and a brother, Henry Johnson, of Richmond, Ind.

Dr. Johnson was born January 12, 1853, at Washington, in a house that has been replaced by the rotunda of the House of Representatives Office Building. His father was the late Judge Nimrod H. Johnson who was widely known for his knowledge of history, poetry, and general literature.

He matriculated at Earlham College, where he was graduated at 18. He entered business in Chicago, and after two years became connected with the editorial staff of Scribner's Monthly, afterward the Century Magazine. In 1909, he was made editor in chief. He continued in that position until June, 1913, when he retired.

Among some of his better-known poems are "Praise to Thee, O God of Freedom;" "Apostrophe to Greece;" "The Voice of Webster;" "Hands Across the Sea;" "Italian Rhapsody;" Panama ode, "Goethals of Panama;" "The Corridors of Congress," and many "Poems of the Great War," including "Rheims" and "The Haunting Face," depicting the portrait of a child lost on the Lusitania.

Dr. Johnson was appointed by President Wilson as American Ambassador to Rome in 1920 to succeed Thomas Nelson Page, who resigned. He represented the United States as an unofficial observer at the San Remo conference of the Supreme Council of the League of Nations. He was one of the founders of the League to Enforce Peace.

Chillicothe, Ohio, Oct. 14 (AP).—John H. Davis, of nearby Brainbridge, who claimed to be the oldest resident of Ohio, died at his home last night. Relatives said he was 112 years old. Davis said he was born May 23, 1825, in Campbell County, Va.

Lodge Leader Dies

WILLIAM H. McCONNELL.

W. H. McConnell's Funeral Tomorrow

Odd Fellow and religious services for William H. McConnell, 59, chief of the postmasters' accounts section of the Postoffice division, General Accounting Office, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at Metropolitan Baptist Church, Sixth and A streets northeast.

All branches of the I. O. O. F., with which Mr. McConnell had been connected for many years, will be represented. Church services will be conducted by Dr. John Compton Ball. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mr. McConnell, who died yesterday at Sibley Hospital after a short illness, entered Government service in 1905, when he became an employe of the bookkeeping section of the auditor for the Postoffice Department.

The 100th grand master of the I. O. O. F. of the District of Columbia, Mr. McConnell was also past chief patriarch of Fred Stuart Encampment, No. 7; member of Canton Washington, No. 1, P. M.; Dorcas Rebekah Lodge, No. 4, I. O. O. F.; Federal City Lodge, No. 20, I. C. O. F.; Myron M. Parker Lodge, F. A. A. M., and Lincoln Camp, Modern Woodmen of America.

Born at Turners Station, Ky., Mr. McConnell, as a young man, taught in Kentucky schools, and for five years was secretary of the Kentucky Education Association.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Anna McConnell; a daughter, Mrs. Helen McConnell Fall, of Washington; a brother, Levi McConnell, of Indianapolis, and two sisters, Mrs. J. D. Woodley, of Indianapolis, and Mrs. Alice Cannon, of Turners Station.

Mr. McConnell's home was at 813 Tenth street northeast.

Maj. W. H. Kyle Expires at 69; Served in War

Ex-Vice President of Memphis Bank Survived by Widow Here.

Final rites for Maj. William H. Kyle, U. S. Army, retired, 69, who died Wednesday at Mount Alto Hospital after a brief illness, will be held tomorrow at 11 at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Maj. Kyle is survived by his wife Mrs. Martha Ruth Martin Kyle, 1725 Q street northwest.

Retired from the Army in 1928, Maj. Kyle served throughout the World War in the adjutant-general's department as personal adjutant of the Thirtieth Division at Camp Sevier. Following the Armistice, he was appointed personnel adjutant of Debarkation Hospital, Hampton, Va.

Shortly after his discharge in 1919, Maj. Kyle was recalled to service by special act of President Wilson. As a reserve officer, he sat on the Claims Board until its work was completed.

Born in Vevey, Ind., Maj. Kyle moved to Memphis while still a youth He entered the Tennessee National Guard at 19, and became a captain of the Chickasaw Guard unit, Memphis. In 1916 and 1917 he served with Tennessee troops on the Mexican border. Mustered out only a few days before the United States declared war against Germany, he immediately entered the regular Army.

Prison Association Defends Paroles

Philadelphia, Oct. 14 (AP).—The American Prison Association passed resolutions tonight supporting anti-lynching legislation and defending the parole system against indiscriminate attacks.

The association, holding its sixty-seventh annual congress, said "the weakness to be found in parole programs in many States results largely from inadequate personnel and financial support."

Rice M. Youell, warden of the Virginia State Penitentiary, was elected president of the association, succeeding William J. Ellis, of Trenton, N. J. Vice presidents named included Harold E. Donnell, superintendent of State prisons, Maryland, and James V. Bennett, director of the United States Bureau of Prisons, Washington.

Ackerman Sees Press As 'Greatest' Educator

New Orleans, Oct. 14 (AP).—Radio won't supplant the newspaper as the Nation's "greatest educational force," Carl Z. Ackerman, dean of the graduate scool of Columbia, here for the meeting of managing editors of Associated Press newspapers, said today.

"The spoken word appeals more to emotions; the written word more to reason," he said.

C. I. O. to Reply Today to Peace Plea of A. F. L.

Lewis Aides See Offer as Plot to Shift Onus for Dissension.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, Oct. 14.—John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chairman, said tonight the strategy conference of his leaders here would reply tomorrow to a new offer of the A. F. of L. to seek a settlement of their differences.

Lewis spent several hours discussing with leaders the newest proposal of the American Federation of Labor for the united labor movement, but declined to make a statement.

C. I. O. officials said privately the A. F. of L. had shifted to them the onus of not paving the way for a peaceful settlement of dual unionism, which grew out of controversies here just two years ago. On Tuesday, the C. I. O. proposed to A. F. of L. a peace conference of 100 leaders from each organization, but this plan was rejected by the Federation.

Lewis Is Sick.

Lewis, ill of dysentery, had to absent himself from today's conferences.

The Denver action brought no comment, either, from members of the resolutions committee who were meeting privately to consider pronouncements on the undeclared war between China and Japan.

The conference here, having promised sanctity of contracts, moved toward the end of its strategy meeting by adopting these resolutions:

Making renewed demands that Tom Girdler and Eugene Grace, presidents of Republic Steel and Bethlehem Steel Companies, respectively, be called before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee to face responsibility for what the C. I. O. termed "industrial spy tactics."

Criticising the Maritime Commission and Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation for actions it claimed deprived seamen of legal collective bargaining rights.

Terming conduct of Chicago police durnig the Memorial Day steel strike riots "a disgrace to any community making even a pretense of being civilized."

Assailing as a violation of labor's constitutional rights steel workers' treatment during the Chicago riots and opposition of Mayor Overton and Police Commissioner Davis, of Memphis, to the presence of C. I. O. organizers.

Cites New York "Terror."

Condemning "vicious assaults" on longshoremen organizers, seamen and leaflet distributors, and urging New York City unions to take decisive action to end "terror" on the New York waterfront.

Urging Congress to adopt a farm program guaranteeing producers cost of production and recognizing the "community of economic interest between the industrial workers and the farmers."

Proposing State housing authorities which it said would expedite construction of additional low-rent housing facilities, and asking State legislation to protect labor, ranging from State labor relations boards to limiting authority of courts to issue injunctions in labor disputes.

10-Year Water Plan Is Mapped by U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Government experts are meeting this month with State representatives in 45 cities to lay out a six to ten year program for development of the Nation's water resources.

Officials of the national resources committee said yesterday a comprehensive survey of development needs in all the major water basins will be submitted to President Roosevelt at the end of the year.

"Our aim is to find out what the States and cities want," an official of the committee said, "and then to integrate those needs with plans of the various Government agencies which deal with water problems."

Governors of all States will be represented at meetings covering all the country's drainage basins, and members of the 46 State planning boards also will be present.

part of the Committee for Industrial Organization."

Oppose Mass Committee.

They know as we know that we cannot employ mass committees in negotiating agreements with employers. They know as we do that Governments do not employ mass conferences in dealing with matters of State.

"Large groups are employed to carry on conflicts. Small groups are employed to negotiate peace, understanding, agreement and co-operation. Mass conferences lead to expressions of bitterness and hatred and not to words of friendly counsel and co-operative understanding."

The reply found fault with the spirit of the C. I. O. offer, too.

"We hold the language used as not germane to the proposal itself but as designed more for propaganda than expressive of a real desire for peace and unity," it said.

"We are of the conviction that the rank and file of the organizations hereinbefore in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor will want again to become in complete association with the parent body—The American Federation of Labor that gave their organizations birth, nurtured them to growth and aided them in attaining the conditions of life and work now employed by them."

Blaze Destroys 18 Months' Work Of Virginia Poet

Halifax, Va., Oct. 14. (AP).—Poet Craddock Edmunds besought the muse today in the forlorn hope of building once more his "Nocturne," final poem of a trilogy, destroyed by fire which razed the small log cabin where its author labored 18 months to give his brain child to the world.

"Nocturne" would have completed the sequence of "Renaissance" and "Five Men" previously published sepraately, and with those poems, was to have been published in a book this winter.

"Where can I find that inspiration again?" the young poet asked glumly when asked if he would attempt to rewrite the destroyed poem.

P.-T. A. Elects Officers.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 14.—City Commissioner Edgar Reynolds was elected president of the Johnson Heights School Parent-Teacher Association last night. Other officers are: L. Brooks Starcher, vice president; Frank H. Ansel, secretary, and Raymond H. Lapp, treasurer.

Friendly Burglar Ministers to Sick On 'Business Call'

Waltham, Mass., Oct. 14 (AP).—How a burglar stopped "work" long enough to massage his victim's neck to relieve pain caused by a sinus infection, was related today in district court by Police Sergt. James M. Igoe.

Igoe, prosecuting Robert E. Ulrich, 25, of Boston and Stockton, Calif., on a charge of armed robbery at the home of Miss Elsie Coolidge, of Watertown, said the ministrations occurred in the home of John Cronin.

The officer said Ulrich awakened Cronin, who said, "I'm sick, don't make any noise."

"What's the matter?" the intruder asked.

"Heart trouble and sinus trouble."

The burglar recommended a massage to relieve the latter, the officer added, and administered a stiff rub. Then, Igoe told Judge P. Sarsfield Cunniffe, Cronin indicated where "a few dollars" were hidden and Ulrich took them and departed.

Jones-Lewis Post Names Miller as Commander

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 14.—Jones-Lewis Post 896, Veterans of Foreign Wars, named John E. Miller commander at the annual meeting held here last night. It also elected: Senior vice commander, Ernest K. Ritter; junior vice commander, Earl K. Sonner; quartermaster, Ambrose L. Anderson; post advocate, Herbert E. Hannis; surgeon, James K. Guthrie; chaplain, George F. Whitmore; trustees, Arthur W. Fey, Benjamin J. Thomas and James H. Wilt.

1,000 Jewish Students Protest 'Ghetto' Seats

Warsaw, Oct. 14 (AP).—A thousand Jewish university students staged a quiet strike today against inauguration of classroom "Ghetto benches" marked to show they were for Jews. Strong police reinforcements patrolled the city to guard against violence which did not develop. The strikers occupied the Jewish students' home and announced they would stay there until the "Ghetto bench" regulation was rescinded.

Pilots Land 2 Planes After Collision in Air

Los Angeles, Oct. 14 (AP).—Two airplanes collided in the air at municipal airport today, and two pilots and a student escaped death. Vance Breese, Northrop Aircraft Corporation test pilot, brought a speedy, new type Navy "bullet" to a safe landing despite a bent propeller, torn wing and battered aerial mast.

In the other ship, a slow fleet training plane, Instructor Ross Seeley grabbed the controls from a youthful pupil and landed safely also. A wing of the training craft was torn.

Colored Units Pledge Aid to Lunch Drive

Many Tickets Sold for Benefit Boxing Show on Monday.

Colored groups and individuals in Washington will do all they can to aid the drive to raise a free lunch fund for the District's needy school children, it was promised last night at a joint meeting of white and colored organizations of the Citizens' Emergency Committee at Wesley Hall.

Mrs. Mary McNeill, member of the Board of Education, expressed belief that they would shoulder as much of the responsibility as possible. She said that unemployment is high among them at present, and pointed to the need for a "program that would prevent this need from arising again."

Plans for beginning the lunch program Monday are continuing as reports of ticket sales roll in from policemen and firemen, who will be chiefly responsible for success of the first big benefit program given for the campaign—the boxing show Monday night at Griffith Stadium.

The show is being sponsored by Joe Turner, who has advanced his personal check for $1,000 in order that the lunch project can open Monday without waiting until after the boxing events.

First Contribution.

First contribution in the "Take a Hungry Child to Lunch" part of the campaign was made yesterday by the National Council of Jewish Women. It was for $56.37 and was brought to lunch drive headquarters in the Mayflower Hotel by Mrs. W. G. Illch.

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the citizens' committee, expressed the belief that "almost every civic group will follow the example of this organization."

She announced that the supply of placards and donation receptacles for restaurants and hotels asked to co-operate in the drive ran short but that an additional supply will be available, probably today, and all downtown "lunchers" will have the opportunity of making their contributions.

Donations totaling $345 were received in the mail by Mrs. Boyle yesterday morning. The American Legion Post of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing has donated $25, and the Variety Club has sent in a contribution of $250, she said.

Threat of Disease.

Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, managing director of the Tuberculosis Association, yesterday made the following statement in regard to the drive:

"A hungry child, whose energy is depleted, is the first victim of any communicable disease, whether it is a common cold or the deadly white plague.

"Nourishing food creates the energy so vitally necessary in safeguarding the health of a child.

"If a child can be fed a hot, nourishing lunch for 7 cents a day, I can think of no better way to invest so small an amount of money."

Radio programs explaining lunch needs are continuing. Frank Buckley will interview Miss Bessie Baker, superintendent of Opportunity House, tonight at 11 o'clock over Station WOL. Miss Baker will present actual cases of need as she sees them daily. Time for the broadcast will be given by Joe Cherner, local automobile dealer.

Another feature scheduled for tonight is the benefit dance tonight at the Old Dominion Boat Club in Alexandria by the Young Democrats of the District.

D. C. Family Lives on Turnips, Starving Children Go to School

'Tobacco Road' Conditions Are Prevalent in Deanewood Area.

(In its effort to show the actual need behind the drive to raise funds for free school lunches for the District's needy children, The Post is presenting a series of actual hunger stories as they happened in the city of Washington. This is the fourth.)

Remember "Tobacco Road" and all the raw turnips eaten by the Lester family? Some of the folks in Georgia were terribly peeved at the starvation conditions presented, said they couldn't happen there.

Well, they can and do happen in the District of Columbia. Out in the Deanwood neighborhood last week a colored family lived for nearly the whole week on a bushel of turnips—and the three children went to school just the same.

No complaints were registered, but teachers can tell when children are going hungry—as more than 5,000 are in Washington today. Arithmetic and spelling don't come so easy on an empty stomach.

The teacher of the Deanwood area children took it upon herself to investigate the situation, and found the remains of the turnips. Her story reached Mrs. Mary McNeill, member of the Board of Education.

While hot school lunches for the children would not wholly solve the unemployment problems of the family in question, they would help considerably. They would be a factor in warding off diseases that prey on lowered vitality, and they would assist in keeping the taxpayer's school dollar from going to waste.

According to Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the citizens' emergency committee, there are many "turnip alleys" in Washington.

Exemption Denied In Soft Coal Code

By the Associated Press.

The Coal Commission denied yesterday the application of the Wheeling (W. Va.) Steel Corporation to exempt from the soft coal code and its tax provisions two coal mines owned and operated by the corporation's subsidiaries.

With scores of exemption requests pending, commission officials said the decision, the first interpretation of the exemption clause of the Guffey-Vinson coal act, would vitally affect subsidiary control of coal mines by some of the largest railroads, utility companies and manufacturing concerns in the United States.

The Guffey-Vinson act exempts from taxation and regulation soft coal consumed by the producer or transported by the consumer to himself for consumption by him.

Bailey Forbids Strike Drivers To Picket Store

Court Holds Law Gives No Rights to Employes of Tranfer Firm.

Justice Jennings Bailey yesterday issued a preliminary injunction restraining striking employes of the Merchants Transfer Co. from picketing the Lansburgh & Brother department store.

The injunction was directed against the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stable Men and Helpers Union No. 639, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, its business representative, Homer Patterson and others.

Justice Bailey's order was believed the first in the District involving the picketing of a store by strikers from an outside organization under contract with the store.

Attorneys Meinburg, Sweeten & Greene, of Washington and Baltimore, and the firm of Lyon & Lyon, of Washington, representing the Lansburghs, claimed the pickets never worked for the store, but were employes of the transfer firm which makes deliveries for it.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Correct Defense.

In most good bidding a player is able to show both his high card strength and his approximate distribution in the same bids. There are times, however, when one must choose between rebidding a strong suit and rebidding in notrump. The rebid of a suit generally hints at unbalanced distribution; the rebid in notrump states quite definitely that the hand is balanced. North chose to rebid in notrump, in the hand below, since he felt that it was more important to show a hand with strength in every suit than merely to show a strong heart suit.

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

North was not quite strong enough for a rebid of three hearts and hesitated to bid two notrump since he was afraid that such a bid, also, would be a slight stretch. His hand was much too strong for a simple rebid of hearts and he, therefore, correctly chose the slight overbid of two notrump. South naturally rebid his spades and North, having committed himself, raised to game in spades.

West opened the deuce of diamonds and East captured dummy's Queen with his Ace. The three of diamonds was returned and West's Jack forced out the King. A small trump was led from the dummy and West won the trick with his Ace. West was now at the cross-roads and, fortunately for his side, realized it. An "automatic" diamond continuation would have given declarer his contract. South would have ruffed, drawn trumps and taken the heart finesse. Even though East would win a heart trick, South would be able to discard his losing clubs on dummy's established hearts.

West saw that two tricks more were needed to defeat the contract. It was not merely enough for his partner to have the King of hearts—another trick had to be secured. A review of the second trick convinced West that no further tricks could be won in diamonds. East's return of the three showed that he had started with four diamonds; and South, therefore, with a doubleton.

The only hope was that East had the King of clubs as well as the King of hearts. In that case only a club lead at this point would enable his side to defeat the contract. Needless to say, West's careful analysis was amply rewarded.

Germany's Pledge To Belgium.

In formally pledging itself "under no circumstances to impair" the "inviolability and integrity" of Belgium, the German government is very largely sanctifying a certainty.

It is no secret in Berlin that another German invasion of Belgium would, as before, meet with the combined resistance of Great Britain and France. Thus Germany is now solemnly promising to refrain from doing what she could not do anyway without meeting formidable resistance. Yet by taking a step which is likely to contribute to Belgium's peace of mind, Germany stands to reap considerable advantages.

With the inviolability of her territory guaranteed by Germany, as well as by Great Britain and France, Belgium is now freed of any compulsion to join in an anti-German combination or to permit her territory to be used as a jumping-off place for an attack on the Third Reich. In view of this circumstance, and the fact of Swiss neutrality, the only way Germany can now be attacked from the West is across the Rhine frontier. There its defenses are now rapidly being made impregnable.

It is this factor of self-interest which makes it possible to accept the German action regarding Belgium at face value. It is easy, even for a totalitarian regime inclined to be contemptuous of international standards and restraints, to be virtuous when virtue is likely to pay handsome dividends. But the German action would be a more convincing peace gesture were it duplicated in the case, say, of Czechoslovakia.

Nonetheless it is significant that the journalistic mouthpieces of the Nazi government are anxious to have the world, and particularly the United States, believe that the stand on Belgium is proof that Germany does not belong in the category of actual or potential aggressors denounced by President Roosevelt in his Chicago speech.

Apparently the President's words went home, so far as Germany was concerned. That minimization of the importance of the United States in world affairs, encountered frequently in this country, finds no counterpart in the attitude of the outside world. Other nations and peoples are anything but convinced that American co-operation for peace will lead to nothing.

On the contrary, as the official interpretation of the German pledge to Belgium proves, they are only too eager to be regarded by the United States as belonging with this Nation in the camp of peaceful states.

Peace Needs Safeguards.

The so-called Peace Preservation Committee of Peiping, a catspaw of the Japanese militarists now holding China's former capital in their grip, has published an appeal to China and Japan to cease fighting and commence peace negotiations.

At first glance there would seem to be much, both on humanitarian and material grounds, to recommend such a plan. The longer the undeclared war in the Far East lasts the greater the destruction of life and property that is certain to result. Certainly so far as Japan is concerned the advantage of an immediate armistice on all fronts would be very considerable.

Though the Japanese forces at Shanghai have so far failed to break the courageous resistance of Chiang Kai-shek's armies, Japan has made considerable headway in the north. All or a part of the five provinces of Hopei, Chahar, Suiyan, Shansi and Shantung are now in the grip of the invaders. A cessation of fighting would ease the increasingly burdensome financial pressure on Japan. It would temporarily end all talk of foreign pressure on the island empire. And, at the same time, it would enable the Japanese to consolidate their far-flung gains without interference.

By the same token, however, there is every reason why China should reject such a peace plan unless it is coupled with the immediate withdrawal of Japanese troops to positions they held before the present fighting began, on July 7. Any other stand would constitute a capitulation on the part of the Nanking government, which thus far has given every indication that it plans to resist the invaders with all its strength.

Official Japanese spokesmen have repeatedly declared that Japan does not desire any Chinese territory. Such promises would be impressive if, in offering to negotiate peace, the Tokyo government would agree to withdraw its troops to points where by well-recognized treaties they have a legal right to be.

The presence of such troops in the interior of China unfortunately constitutes proof positive to the outside world of Japan's aggressive intent.

An Orderly Retreat.

In an address at the University of North Carolina last Tuesday Mr. Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney General, discussed the function of the judiciary in a way lending itself to lively quotation. Those who are properly sensitive to the implications of the President's court-packing program have seized upon some of these excerpts as indication that this fight is not really over. But a careful reading of the full text of the speech gives a contrary impression.

"There is evidence," Mr. Jackson admits, "that judicial response to public needs, even if slow, is certain. During the last year the Supreme Court has cleared the way toward improving the functioning of the United States as an operating and co-operating mechanism."

Though somewhat grudging, this statement is significant, coming from one who was a strong supporter of the effort to pack the Supreme Court in order to insure its complete subordination to the executive will. And it is not the less significant for its coincidence with President Roosevelt's last fireside chat, which omitted any reference to judicial "reform" as an imperative duty for the forthcoming special session of Congress.

There should be a certain sympathy with the plight of those who went out on a limb for the court-packing procedure and were left embracing the promotion of Senator Black as the tangible fruit of the undertaking. Thus viewed, the virtual retraction of position now made by Mr. Jackson is important. Certainly it is another spade of earth on the coffin of Mr. Roosevelt's extraordinary proposal when one of his chief legal advisers states that without this scheme "the judicial response to public needs" seems certain.

Like any skillful tactician, the Assistant Attorney General is fighting a rear guard action. He finds, without much supporting evidence, that "the most dangerous enemy of our democracy is the complexity of our Government." And from this he somehow draws the conclusion that "either democracy must surrender to the judges or the judges must yield to democracy." It should be clear, of course, that if our federal form of government is the source of trouble the way to correction is to alter the foundations, not to blame the courts for reading the architectural blueprints as they are.

But Mr. Jackson, like many another theoretical exponent of untrammeled majority rule, does not exhibit the courage of his convictions. Rather than advocate a fundamental change which would undoubtedly be unpopular he prefers to condemn the judiciary as "the check of a past generation on the present." If was, of course, intended to be so. And unless one argues on the strange assumption that all change is automatically progress, it is well for the country that it is so.

There is no reason to believe that on popular referendum the people of the United States would ever accept the court-packing scheme as a desirable solution of constitutional problems. President Roosevelt admitted as much when he failed to raise the issue in the last campaign. Assistant Attorney General Jackson admits as much when he now predicts that "we will no doubt leave to posterity, unimpaired, our inherited controversy over judicial supremacy."

So long as that controversy is not resolved by triumph of a dictatorial executive it will be valuable for its undoubted stimulus to an evolutionary interpretation of the organic law.

A Special Traffic Court.

Reports that the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council will recommend creation of a special traffic court have the appearance of a trial balloon. Perhaps the council would like to hear the community's reaction to that plan before finally submitting its conclusions. That attitude would be quite understandable, for the proposal does raise a number of important questions.

The present haphazard method of handling traffic cases is certainly unsatisfactory. No consistent policy is followed in the imposition of fines and penalties. Each judge adheres to his own inclination, within the broad limits of the law, and the rapid rotation of judges in the traffic division of the Police Court is a source of confusion and inefficiency.

Some means of bringing order out of this unsystematic procedure is clearly desirable. But the creation of special courts and special prosecutors to attack one phase of the law enforcement problem can easily be overdone. If one group of cases should be singled out for special treatment, there would be a good argument for further segregation. The net result might be still greater confusion, inequity and inefficiency than now exist.

Disparity between sentences imposed for similar traffic offenses could be eliminated by the adoption of a uniform schedule of fines and penalties, as Judge Edward M. Curran of the Police Court has suggested. The specified penalties would then be imposed in all cases except where the judge might find extenuating circumstances and so indicate in writing. That system is already operating satisfactorily in New York and other cities.

The difficulties which arise when one judge hears a case and then moves from the traffic court before deciding it could be greatly minimized by slowing down the rate of judicial rotation. A judge could just as well sit in the traffic court for a year or two years, instead of a month, as at present. That would assure continuity of policy and of service without leaving a judge in this particular branch of the court long enough to make his job a matter of tedious routine.

It appears, then, that a remedy could be readily found without going to the extreme measure of setting up a new tribunal to handle traffic cases. Should the council feel that the entire Police Court is deficient in some respects, that would be a different matter. The problem would then be improvement of the whole court and not just one section of it.

Results Of Factionalism.

The A. F. of L. convention has passed a resolution roundly condemning the National Labor Relations Board for alleged favoritism toward the C. I. O. A conference of C. I. O. leaders has also gone on record as opposed to the board, which, they charge, has made decisions inimical to their organization. Thus we find these bitterly hostile labor groups united in their enmity to a Federal agency established to protect workers against employer interference with collective bargaining. The situation is a rather ironical commentary upon the foresight of those who hailed passage of the Wagner Labor Relations Act as the dawn of a new day in industrial relations.

The NLRB, of course, is a victim of the factional cleavage in the ranks of organized labor. This has forced the board, however, unwillingly, to act as a mediator or intervenor in jurisdictional disputes. The best proof that it has tried to be impartial is afforded by the fact that it has become a target for abuse from both sides. Under the law it is the duty of the board to decide what is the most representative labor unit for purposes of collective bargaining. Then the employes in that authorized unit vote to determine who shall represent them in negotiations with employers.

Thus it is evident that the way in which the NLRB exercises its power of choice is a matter of great moment to rival groups. Whichever one it may happen to sponsor, antagonism from the other will be aroused. Unless labor organizations agree to present a united front to employers, therefore, the relatively simple machinery set up for collective bargaining under the Wagner act cannot function satisfactorily.

Even if the NLRB manages to survive the mass assaults upon it, its decisions will necessarily lack that authority and finality which they should have and might have if labor were not divided into rival factions. In their shortsighted struggle for supremacy, the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. are in danger of forgetting that collective bargaining is designed to strengthen the position of labor in dealing with employers. The Wagner act put a powerful instrument into the hands of organized labor in that respect. It did not, however, attempt to protect labor organizations from the consequences of their own folly in fighting among themselves.

Jurisdictional disputes destroy the basis for genuinely representative collective bargaining and give employers legitimate reasons for refusing to enter into contracts with unions. Instead of passing condemnatory resolutions, therefore, and demanding changes in the Wagner act, both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. should be striving to compose their differences before they have completely discredited a Federal agency from which much was at one time expected.

A Study From Outside.

The Association of Reserve City Bankers recently announced that it has completed plans to "initiate an impartial and scientific study of American banking, credit and other financial problems."

According to Robert Strickland, president of the association, the undertaking will be the first comprehensive study of the sort since the National Monetary Commission completed its work a quarter of a century ago. Of course there have been many valuable special studies by governmental agencies and by local and national banking associations. But, as Mr. Strickland points out, the bankers have not instigated independent studies of their problems similar to those undertaken for organized industrial groups.

Among the subjects now suggested for investigation are real estate mortgage financing, consumer credit and installment financing, investment problems of the banks and the significance of time deposits in commercial banks. The mere listing of such important topics, with which bankers are compelled to deal daily without always recognizing their long-range economic significance, is indication of the potential social value of the proposed study.

The opportunistic way in which banking legislation has been changed to meet emergencies, instead of being subjected to thoroughgoing revision designed to meet changed conditions, is another reason why bankers should welcome opportunity to clarify their thinking on important professional problems. When they are better informed they will be in a position to agree upon a program of legislative reform designed not only to strengthen the banking structure but to adapt it better to the public needs.

It's no doubt best that most of us are in ruts. We'd probably slip into the ditch if we weren't.

The Referee.

"Fighting Intolerable Aggression."

The letters below request explanation of a phrase in the editorial entitled "America Finds Her Voice," printed in The Post of October 6.

As to the atrocities charged by both sides in the Spanish civil war, The Post has no first-hand information. It certainly has never condoned and would never condone any of the outrages which our correspondents regard as attested fact. Assumption that this could be the case is only made possible by isolating a single phrase of the editorial from its context.

The Post believes with President Roosevelt that the peace of America is threatened by the practices of those nations which are "taking sides in civil warfare in nations that have never done them any harm." The indorsement of the "Spaniards defending Madrid" against "intolerable aggression" applied only to their resistance to an organized foreign intervention which sets a disastrous precedent in international relations.

It is manifestly unreasonable to regard this support for the President's Chicago speech as having, even by remote implication, anything to do with religious issues.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Day by day my mind is becoming more befuddled by reading your news and editorials concerning the Spanish situation. At the outbreak of the civil war in Spain I remember quite well that the papers, The Washington Post included, carried reports of the numberless executions of priests, nuns and laymen, the burning of churches and convents and other inhuman acts by the so-called loyalists.

Now, or so it appears in The Post, the situation is reversed. Gen. Franco is the monster. He is the aggressor. The rebel chieftain, along with Hitler and Mussolini, is attempting to destroy Spanish democracy as represented by these self-same loyalists. I am afraid this is a trifle thick.

Who are the loyalists? What sort of democracy are they attempting to establish? Are they not to be associated with the Communists, the Syndicalists and the Anarchists within their ranks? And are such men really interested in any form of democracy?

And if you do know that Moscow is backing the loyalists—and you certainly must know it by now—why is the fact ignored, while the intervention of Germany and Italy is stressed?

You must also know why Germany and Italy are intervening. It is not because they have anything to fear from a true Spanish democracy, but simply because they have everything to fear from a Soviet Spain.

You say in your editorial of Wednesday, October 6, "The forces now fighting intolerable aggression, whether in the case of the Chinese at Shanghai or the Spaniards defending Madrid, are neither cowards nor weaklings. They are prepared to carry on the fight for human decency unaided."

Apparently you do believe that the Spaniards defending Madrid are unaided. But, even granted what is not so, are not these same Spaniards responsible for the deaths of thousands of innocent nuns, priests and laymen? Is this fighting for human decency? Does it take courage and strength to murder the defenseless? What sort of democracy can be founded upon such religious hatred?

C. F. HILLEARY.
Washington, Oct. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I wish to call your attention to one of the concluding paragraphs in your editorial of October 6, in which you uphold the Valencia or Communist government in Spain. This is particularly offensive to Catholics.

T. J. BURKS.
Washington, Oct. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I refer to your editorial, "America Finds Her Voice," in The Post of October 6, in which you referred to "the forces now fighting intolerable aggression"—the Spaniards defending Madrid—who "are neither cowards nor weaklings" and who are "prepared to carry on the fight for human decency unaided."

Does The Post believe that the bishops, priests, sisters, brothers and laymen who have been murdered by the tens of thousands by the followers of the Leftist government in Spain were cowards or weaklings?

Does The Post believe that the Catholics of Spain who are fighting to perpetuate Christ and their church in Spain are weaklings and cowards?

Does The Post believe that the murderers of the Catholic religious orders and laymen in Spain are courageous?

Does The Post believe that murder, arson and unspeakable outrages committed by the Leftists of Spain constitute human decency?

JOHN MORAWSKI.

Will you please explain the meaning of your editorial of October 6?

A CATHOLIC STUDENT.
Washington, Oct. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In your editorial of October 6 you slurred those who have been fighting and dying for the freedom of religion in Spain. It was so anti-Catholic that it rankled me and forced me to write to you.

I believe that any man has the right to exercise his opinion on any subject, but when this opinion is printed in the newspaper he should see to it that his opinion is based on truth. In discussing the Spanish situation when you speak of the help given by Italy and Germany also state the greater help given by France and Russia. When you condemn fascism, also condemn communism. Also that a Popular Front when dominated by communism cannot be a democratic form of government.

GREGORY F. THURIS.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your editorial of October 6, "America Finds Her Voice," was very unfair to me and my fellow Catholics in its references to Spain. I regret that certain facts of the Spanish situation which apply to the Catholic Church were so completely ignored in your editorial.

'Balance Budget—Now.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

President Roosevelt on his Western jaunt to some of Squandermania's pet projects renewed his assurances of future economy. A demonstration of the sincerity of his words is now urgently asked.

A balanced budget—first; and cut the schemes to fit; or heave them overboard. Let the Congress remember this if the President—again—forgets.

Or, to paraphrase the President's words in a previous chat on the subject of creating a court packed to his specifications: Balance the budget—NOW.

With Landon In Office.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I'm willing to bet my weekly dole that under Landon (I didn't vote for him or anybody else) our budget would be near balance, 10,000 parasitic hangers-on would be removed from the local traffic scene, jobs as superficial and useless as my own would be kicked out of existence, and the savings used toward budget balance and debt repayment. Some New Deal hangovers would still be masquerading, but under new titles, with a successful effort made to cut down costs. This I firmly believe, though what they call a "lifelong Democrat."

I did think President Roosevelt, the "man of action," would have the elementary wisdom to act along similar lines his second term. Instead, what did we get? Pulse-feeling, to discover if his smile and personality are still ace-high in the sticks; political efforts to line up the people against those forces that helped maintain a tinge of sanity in government; a session of Congress wasted on a private feud, to the detriment of business and disarming of confidence; the usual promises to bleed those horrible royalists; a lot of rah-rah about "just beginning fights" that belongs on a correspondence college campus.

"No Foolish Fawning."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Allow me to congratulate J. O. Knott upon his letter of October 5, which appeared in The Post under the caption, "The Windsors' Visit."

I too am of his opinion regarding the coming visit of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor and agree with him that "courtesy is due to the couple, but no foolish fawning and undue enthusiasm."

If the duke is coming to the United States for a serious purpose he should be left free to pursue that purpose. Such an investigation as he contemplates cannot be pursued from a ringside seat in the night clubs of New York or the hunting fields of the Green Spring Valley country.

Let us be mindful of the serious matters which confront the world today and remember that Edward "had the highest office of a civil sort in his hand and the greatest chance any man now living had to assist the world in its present chaotic condition."

A War Referendum.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I feel impelled to express my views on the subject of holding a referendum before declaring war.

Those in favor of a referendum seem to reason on the theory that while the United States was holding a referendum the aggressor nation would be quiescent, holding his horses until the outcome of our referendum was determined.

It is certain that the time wasted in holding a referendum and the concomitant indecision would largely nullify any preparations we may have made for our own salvation up to that time.

With thug nations stalking the world, peace has become an expensive luxury and, if we would have peace, we must as a nation be ready and willing in a time of stress to forego some of our personal and economic freedom lest in the end we lose both.

Roosevelt Popularity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mr. Arthur J. Nolan says President Roosevelt could not have been re-elected without the aid of campaign funds in the form of relief appropriations, etc. I agree with him.

Mr. Roosevelt's so-called "popularity" has already cost the country between $12,000,000,000 and $15,000,000,000. I am teaching my children that they will be helping pay for this all the rest of their lives.

The Post Impressionist

A Scholar In Madrid.

THERE came to the Library of Congress a week ago a paper-backed book which from the sheer absurdity of its production becomes one of the most interesting exhibits yet to reach this country of the Second World War.

Early in November, 1936, the Rebel Legions of Francisco Franco Bahamonde were at the gates of Madrid and now for 11 months the people in that city have undergone siege. Italian Capronis have daily circled over the capital of Spain, spilling death over the housetops and into the streets; German artillery has ruthlessly bombarded this city of a million people—but sometime in 1937 at Number 28, Paseo de San Vincente, Madrid, Spain, this book was published.

I know the first thing that pops into your mind when you read that: you think it's something about the war, propaganda; but, no, it isn't. After all, that wouldn't be absurd. That would be practical. That has been done. There have been other books published in Madrid during the siege, and countless pamphlets and newspapers, but this book is something else.

It is a dissertation on the Latin text, De Virginitate Beatae Mariae, written in the seventh century by San Ildefonso, Archbishop of Toledo from 657 to 667. An assistant professor of the faculty of philosophy and letters of the Central University of Madrid, Vicente Blanco Garcia, presented this manuscript to the University of Madrid as his doctoral thesis and it was accepted on the 11th day of March, 1936.

Four months and a few days later the Spanish government was struggling against a military rebellion and a foreign invasion; the armed circle tightened around Madrid; the government moved to Valencia; refugees poured in ahead of Franco's men and food became scarce; yet some people in that wracked city were impractical (and that is the only word to use here) to the point of publishing Blanco Garcia's book of 268 pages, with illustrations: the critical words of the editor, the collated Latin text with minute footnotes showing how the versions differed in the 24 texts consulted in preparing the work, the exploration of the fine points of seventh century Latin prose as written in Toledo, Spain—all this, mind you, with the enemy fighting at times within the city itself, and his planes and artillery coming every day!

Poor fool, Vicente Blanco Garcia! Did he think as he proofed this book with the lights muffled against the enemies' aviation that the world would care for his book? when it could seize a gun? Did he think books were ever again to be important in this armed world? There was a library once in University City and the snipers had piled the books up for barricades in a highly practical manner.

What did Blanco Garcia think about as he worked against time? The Moors might be here in a week and the type not even half set! The first proof off and tomorrow one of Mussolini's "saviours of world civilization" might bury type and paper, printer and scholar under a ton of plaster, iron and wood! What resource is there in the human spirit that kept Vicente Blanco Garcia at his thankless task day after day?

Did he believe, against all the counsels of history, that right and reason would somehow prevail? Or did he rationalize on his buena suerte? Twenty-four texts he had collated for the work, in France, England, Italy and Spain—and five of them were now inaccessible, in rebel territory, including the two oldest copies, ninth century manuscripts in the cathedrals at Leon and Toledo. Another was in Florence, hardly friendly territory for any Spaniard but a traitor these days! So he had done it just in the nick of time.

Good fortune was with him. And the faculty acceptance—it came but a few months before the trouble broke out that certainly, to say the least, disrupted academic life in Madrid. So perhaps he reasoned that good fortune would see his book through and so it did. Maybe they got him the next day, the day after his book was off the press, crossing the Gran Via on his way to buy a postage stamp. Suddenly the rebels started their daily shelling of the people of Madrid. The first shell landed in a group a few yards ahead of him and he turned, or started to turn, for he never had time to finish the movement. Perhaps that was the way of it. I don't know.

Poor, foolish scholar, did he think his book was safe because he had put it into print? Did he think it thereby became immune to attack? Did he not know books were printed only to feed the bonfires? Even one like his—"full of Catholic doctrine and elegantly done." Did he think by sending a copy to the Library of Congress he insured its preservation?

Think of this: one bomb into the center back straight through the Rare Book Room; four more incendiaries into the stacks and where the devil is the Library of Congress?

If I had a copy of your book, friend Vicente, I would go out into the Middle West and hide it in a concrete vault down in the ground. It might be safe there for a few years.

If there is a scholar or even a literate man left alive in this world a hundred years from now, he may lament the folly of the Government of the United States, which buried its gold in a bomb-proof vault and left its books a shining mark for any aviator intent on "saving Western civilization."

Fair Enough

Function of the Press.

MR. ROOSEVELT rightly said that five years of fierce discussion and debate have taken the Nation to school in the Nation's business, but there was a rather pointed omission where he mentioned only the radio and the movies as the sources from which the people derived their information on their affairs. The newspapers were in there, too, but many of them have pointed out serious objections not only to some of the President's methods but also to certain of his objectives.

The radio and movies, on the other hand, are beholden to aid, in certain respects exposed to disciplinary action by the Administration, so criticism and examination of issues are out of their line. They had better be good—and they have been good.

• • • •

IT WAS neither on the air nor on the screen that the public learned of those objections to the plan to pack the Supreme Court which the Senate, in the performance of the democratic duty by which Mr. Roosevelt sets such great store, found sufficient to condemn the proposal. It was through the newspapers that the people learned that the President's first nominee to liberalize the court was a progressive statesman who had belonged to the Ku Klux Klan and whose sense of honor is such that he stood mute when the question was raised and the wrong answer was given.

Not from the soundbox nor the screen, but from the press they received their reminder that Mr. Roosevelt, as an active politician in the days of the Klan fight, was in a position where it was almost impossible for him to be in doubt as to Hugo Black's affiliations and that Charles Michaelson, who frequents his office in the White House, must have known in the unlikely event that the President didn't.

This reminder came after he had said he didn't know and raised a question similar to the one created early in the New Deal when Mr. Roosevelt, an old stamp collector with a collector's knowledge of the value of rarities, accepted from Jim Farley a very valuable sheaf of freak stamps, artificially created for a privileged coterie, through questionable use of official authority.

This also was a scoop for journalism, the same agency for the education of the Nation's affairs which later made the exclusive discovery of an interesting coincidence between the political surrender of Huey Long's gang in Louisiana and the dismissal of the outstanding income tax indictments against certain members of that gang. The papers did not fail to point out, as the radio and movies discreetly neglected to mention, that these men were indicted while opposed by the Administration and absolved on surrender, and that any Administration which would resort to such use of the courts was not to be trusted with enlarged authority over the courts.

THE NATION, in its study of the Nation's business, has listened to the radio and looked to the screen in vain for discussion of the income tax committee's ruling that although the affairs of certain private citizens might be publicly discussed, those of Mr. Roosevelt himself must not be examined for clever little schemes having the color of legality.

The press, however, regarded this as a curious working of democracy and gave it passing mention ere proceeding to the complaint of Congressman Treadway, of Massachusetts, who told the House of Representatives that he was "choked off" when he tried to put some questions to the President's son and secretary, Jimmy, regarding reports that Jimmy had had a very large income from the sale of insurance to corporations whose officers were anxious to be in the good graces of the Administration.

The press, being inquisitive and a powerful educator in the disagreeable, as well as the happier, facts of national life, would have presented to the public the contrast, if any, between Jimmy's earnings before and after his father's rise to power and information as to the sources of his income had Mr. Treadway not been, as he put it, choked off.

The press did, however, ask why father and son deserved or accepted special protection from a course of treatment which Mr. Roosevelt prescribed for others.

So, by and large, the papers may console themselves with the thought that Mr. Roosevelt's negative show of displeasure is a tribute for a duty well and fairly done, though not as well done as it might have been had democracy prevailed where it is most often extolled and flouted.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Steak.

The waitress stood beside me, pencil poised.
"A steak," I said.
"A steak, did you say?" she asked.
"Yes, please," I answered.

• • • •

Presently the hostess, or whatever you call the formally dressed young lady in those chain restaurants, came over. She circled me a couple of times, studying me closely.
"Did you order?" she asked.
"Yes," I said.
"What was it you asked for?"
"A steak," I said.
"A steak," she repeated and went away.

• • • •

In a few moments I was conscious of being stared at. The hostess was standing a few feet away with a man in a white coat. He was the manager, I guess. He came over, after considerable whispering.
"You wanted a steak?" he asked.
"Just one, not three," I said.
"THREE!" he exclaimed, turning white.
"Yes," I said, "I have ordered a steak now from three persons, but I want only one steak."
"Don't worry about getting three steaks," he said and went away.

• • • •

After a while the waitress, the hostess and the manager came back with the chef.
"That's him," said the manager to the chef, pointing at me. "What do you think?"
"I'll go ahead with it if you say it's okay," shrugged the chef.
"He looks all right," said the manager.
"He can't be all right!" said the chef.

• • • •

Now another man joined the group. He was from the financial department. There was more whispering. Presently he came over to my table.
"You're the man who ordered a steak?" he smiled.
"Yes. Some time ago."
"Have you any references?" he asked.
"References?"
"Well, after all," he replied, "you asked for a steak, and we can't go filling that kind of an order today without being certain of our ground. Do you bank in this city?"
"Yes," I shouted. "And if it's the same to you I'd like to EAT in this city."

• • • •

He joined the waitress, the hostess, the manager and the chef again. There was considerable gesticulating. It exasperated me. I jumped up, grabbed my hat and strode out.
"The hell with this place! I'll get a steak somewhere else!" I shouted.
"See!" I heard the man from the financial department exclaim. "He's quite mad!"

• • • •

"Something unbecoming?" inquires the saleslady.
"Of course!" is the answer.

• • • •

"There!" explains the milliner as she slams a particularly grotesque hat onto the customer. "How do you like this?"

Quarantine Japan?

Economic Coercion By Four World Powers Could Bring China's Aggressor To Knees; Boycott By People Is Possible.

By Livingston Hartley.
Special Correspondent of The Post.

AROUSED from "watchful waiting" by the President's "clarion call" at Chicago, the United States appears about to take a positive stand for stability and peace. Mr. Roosevelt's hint at the need of a "quarantine" of aggressors was echoed by Senator Pittman's demand for the economic ostracism of Japan. Both of these terms can only be translated today by concerted economic pressure. Meanwhile the State Department has denounced Japan as a violator of treaties, and is about to participate fully in the Brussels conference of Nine-Power Treaty signatories.

What this conference will do depends upon other nations as well as our own. That it will adjourn with only a few moral platitudes to its credit is hardly likely. If it means to stop Japan by methods which do not involve war, only one line of action appears adequate for this purpose—concerted economic pressure.

Economic coercion is no new policy for the United States. We used it against Great Britain and France more than a century ago, under the names of embargo and non-intercourse. Because we were weak at that time and they were strong, because we acted alone, and because we were ourselves peculiarly dependent on foreign trade and shipping, these measures proved costly and unsuccessful.

Two Methods Seen For Applying Pressure.

ECONOMIC PRESSURE can be applied by two different methods, refusal to sell or refusal to buy. Either or both of these methods could be employed in the present instance, extending to all Japanese trade, or only to certain key products.

Since Japan is at present so poor in natural resources, she depends upon foreign nations for the great proportion of materials necessary to prosecute a large scale war. Seventy-three per cent of her iron, 90 per cent of her oil, and all of her cotton, wool and rubber come from abroad. If these imports were to be seriously restricted by international action, she would encounter great difficulty in carrying through to a successful conclusion the ambitious campaign she has begun in China. Consequently, as Mr. Stimson has recently pointed out, her progressive invasion of Chinese territory is actually being made possible by the economic assistance of the United States and other Western powers.

Official Japanese statistics show the enormous proportion of the above materials supplied by four of the Nine-Power Treaty signatories —the United States and the British, Dutch and French empires. During the first five months of the present year, the proportion of these imports furnished by the four above powers were the following:

United States	43.2	60.6	42.5	....	....
The Four Powers ...	64.0	90.7	86.0	80.0	77.3

These figures show how vitally Japan depends upon these four powers, whose Pacific interests she is now imperiling by her Asiatic policy. If they were to join in a concerted embargo of exports of the above products to her, she would have to turn to non-cooperating nations, perhaps, Germany, Italy, and other countries of lesser importance, for whatever supplies they could provide. Such pressure on her economic system would seem certain, in a few months, to weaken her war power.

Japan Might Avoid Embargo Punishment.

THERE ARE, however, two reasons to believe that this form of pressure alone might not be adequate to fulfill its purpose. In the first place, Japan would presumably be able to obtain indirect imports of these materials from her present sources through non-cooperating powers. In the second place, she already has on hand enormous reserve supplies of iron and oil. Her military rulers have long prepared for war in Asia.

A refusal to buy from Japan, either as a primary or a supplementary means of economic action, has, consequently, many advocates. Such a boycott, moreover, would be easier to put into practice, since it would constitute a less direct and immediate blow to the pocketbooks of exporters.

Because her financial position is already undermined, because she lacks foreign exchange, and because her gold reserve decreased one-third since March, is now less than $300,000,000, Japan must pay for her imports by selling her products abroad. The four powers listed above now provide more than three-fifths of her entire foreign market, even if we make no deduction for the Chinese outlets she has now closed by war.

Official Tokyo figures show that the United States alone now takes 25.1 per cent, the United States and the British Empire 49.7 per cent, and all four powers together 61.4 per cent of total Japanese exports. The proportion is even higher in one of her most vital exports, raw silk, of which the United States buys 85.6 per cent, and the four Western powers 99 per cent.

A concerted embargo of imports from Japan would, of course, be more effective if subscribed to by the other signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty, or, better still, by most of the members of the League of Nations. But even enacted only by the United States and the British Empire, it would appear certain to prove conclusive if maintained long enough. It would amount to a relentless and progressive form of economic attrition which must, in the end, force Japan into a compromise settlement with China and the Western powers, regardless of military victories in the field.

Even if Chinese resistance should suddenly collapse, Japan could never consolidate her fruits of aggression as long as so great a proportion of her foreign markets remained closed to her goods. Military victory abroad would ring hollow if the "home front" were threatened with economic collapse.

Such an embargo, moreover, would prove less dangerous to enforce than would a sudden interruption of Japan's supply of oil or iron, due partly to its indirect and cushioned effect. Mussolini threatened war in the event of sanctions on oil, but did not meet the League's boycott of Italian exports with a similar menace. It is easy to see that the Japanese navy might be tempted to secure the oil of the Dutch East Indies by force, but that it could not act directly against customs officials in San Francisco or London.

Wholesale Retaliation By Japanese Navy Unlikely.

EVEN in the unlikely event that hysteria in Tokyo should impel Japan to commit national hara-kiri by attacking all the powers participating in the boycott, these powers need not be obliged to conduct a dangerous naval campaign in the western Pacific. Under present conditions, a conclusive victory could be obtained by economic attrition, and any of their territorial holdings seized by Japan could be regained in exchange for the reopening of her foreign markets.

The figures given above leave little doubt that the United States and the British Empire today have the combined power to halt Japan by economic action. If they fail to do so, we, the American people, may ultimately be called upon to pay a terrible price. Effective control of North China would eliminate the existing Achilles' heel in Japan's power position, providing her with an exclusive market of 80,000,000 people and supplies of iron, coal, cotton and wool she lacks today. Established there firmly, her further expansion over eastern Asia could never again be stopped by methods short of war.

The other Western powers would then fear the eventual loss of their Pacific territories, but the United States would face an even more ominous prospect. A Japanese empire which covered all eastern Asia would still be "land poor" and lacking many minerals resources abundant in our hemisphere. Existing friction over immigration exclusion, Asiatic policy, the Open Door and naval rivalry could only be expected to become more intense. Unless 3,000 years of history teach us nothing, the writing on the wall would point to an eventual duel in the Pacific, in which America, bereft of effective allies, would be confronted with enormous odds.

Should their governments fail to act, there is still a chance that the American and British peoples might bring about the desired result. The figures given above suggest how powerfully an effective popular boycott could influence the national economy of Japan.

A Briny Book

By Howard Zahniser

"Salt-Water Fishing."

THERE WAS A remarkable man who wrote a book many years ago entitled "The Compleat Angler." Had he been able to find his favorite pursuit an actual and eternal fountain of youth, as well as a figurative and life-long one, he probably would have been amazed at the number of books that year after year have followed his complete account. But I have no doubt that he would have reveled in Van Campen Heilner's book published this year on "Salt-Water Fishing."

The nearest that I have ever come to having brine encrust my fishing tackle has been in the brackish Potomac waters near an area known as Tall Timbers. Reading Heilner's descriptions of his experiences makes me feel so regretful that for once I am tempted to look life in the face and gasp something that might sound like "frustration." It is a pleasure to read a book written with such gusto, and, despite the teasing revelation of unknown excitements, I am really grateful for the privilege of experiencing even vicariously so many salt-water excursions.

ANY SALT WATER fisherman can guess from these uninitiated reactions of mine what a book this would be for him! It occurs to me that a great many readers will wish that every page might be waterproofed and the cover tallowed so that the whole volume might be a constant companion on a hundred excursions. I carried my copy to an Izaak Walton convention and found little time to read it myself. It went with me on my last excursion to Tall Timbers, and the tried and true brine anglers who make me welcome in their cabin there admired it so successfully that in some subtle way they extracted from me a promise to leave the volume with them eventually for ever-ready reference.

Salt-water addicts of this District of Columbia who have diligently read Bill Ackerman's columns may get along fairly well without this book if their Ackerman scrapbook is complete, and their excursions never carry them to distant parts. Others of this group, I should think, would find the new Heilner work indispensable. Talbott Denmead, of the Bureau of Fisheries' black bass and anglers division, handed me recently a list of books on angling "compiled . . . for the convenience and information of anglers." With Denmead's help I could find no other work on this list that might satisfy one who has come to know the value of this new book. That experience encourages me to exercise the reviewer's rare privilege of calling the book at hand "an indispensable contribution to the literature on the subject."

ALTHOUGH LIFE may continue to deny me the pleasures of angling in the briny deeps, I shall find in fulfilling the promise to my Tall Timber hosts all the true elation of sacrificial giving. I shall miss not only the otherwise frequent privilege of looking at the book's paintings in color by W. Goadby Lawrence and the 137 continuous pages of photographs, but also the always good fireside reading of exciting excursions and interesting and mystifying descriptions of the ways of fish.

For Heilner has done two things that make such a book worth while. He has written racily of his personal experiences (you should taste the saline tang of some of his dialogue), and he has also methodically compiled every kind of useful information in his subject. Discussing his subjects species by species, he weaves such a spell as you may imagine from this concluding paragraph of his weakfish yarn:

"There's a northwester blowing up. The stars gleam like diamonds in the clean autumn air. 'Way off in the direction of the inlet you can hear the melancholy bong of the bell buoy. The wind sighs and rustles through the marsh grass. The fall is here once more. And with it—weakfish."

• • • •

THEN, TURNING the page, one finds a comprehensive "Guide for Weakfisherman," discussing scientific names, distribution of the species, favorite grounds of the author, tackle, bait and boats. And, not curtailing his generosity in the least, Heilner still adds concise paragraphs entitled "Hooking, playing, landing;" "Weather, tides;" "Where to Go;" and "Record Fish."

So it is for species after species, and then at the end of the whole work are complete chapters on boats and cruising, on tackle and on "Angling Around the World," all packed with the special lore and curious knowledge of an old timer in a great sport. There's even an appendix—on sea serpents!

Well, you may go through the whole book as an excited reader like me, but you also may get only far enough to note that "Chincoteague and Wachapreague, Va., cater to weakfishermen," and that Heilner seems to remember his "best catches of weakfish occurring on nice days, bright sunny ones in the spring or summer and clean crisp ones in the fall." That's the kind of book this is.

American Composer

By William Lyon Phelps

Henry Hadley.

Henry Hadley, American composer and orchestra conductor, died on September 6, 1937, at the age of 66.

He was one of the foremost American musicians. He was the author of four operas, one of which was given at the Metropolitan; four symphonies, three concert overtures, a number of tone poems, and over 150 songs.

• • • •

He was born in Massachusetts, studied in Vienna, was conductor of the Symphony Orchestras in Seattle and in San Francisco, toured Europe conducting various orchestras, also in South America and in Japan, was associate conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and for three years conductor of the Manhattan Orchestra. He was a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

It has been truly said that if there were such a position as American Ambassador in Music to foreign nations, Henry Hadley would have adorned it not only by his professional ability, but by grace and charm and real kindness.

Although he did a great deal to elevate American music, to make American music known abroad, and to get it produced and recognized at home, I am glad indeed that he never believed in "American music" as distinguished from other music. He was a true musician, and he knew that art has no geographical boundaries; he was true to the best, and was not affected by fashions new and strange.

He was a good friend of mine. I had immense respect for his ability and I loved the man.

The Fair-Haired Boy

A report from London says Lord Eustace Percy has decided to resign from the House of Commons. Thus ends, temporarily at least, a political career which, a few years ago, seemed full of promise. Lord Eustace, during the Curzon regime at the foreign office, was one of the fairest of the fair-haired boys. Everyone thought he was destined for high position. Magnificently educated, highly intelligent, popular and admired, he was bound for the top. During the Peace Conference he made a big hit with the Americans, particularly the newspaper men; Clinton Gilbert palled around with him a lot. "I suppose I ought to call you 'My Lord,'" said Gilbert, "but I can't train my American tongue to it." "Call me Percy," said Lord Eustace, who, though not the seventh son of a seventh son, is the seventh son of the seventh Duke of Northumberland, and is His Lordship by courtesy.

At 37 he was in the Cabinet as president of the board of education; his feet were on the ladder. But he had no place in the 1931 ministry. In 1935 he was named minister without portfolio, but finding nothing to do, he resigned. He now has a connection with the University of Durham, and seems to have abandoned politics for education. To succeed in politics, apparently, one must have something which Lord Eustace, despite his culture and his charm, has failed to acquire.

Tom McCarthy

What Would You Have Done?

HE GREW up on the edge of the Columbian National forest in Washington; saw his father plough a strip around their home as protection against fire, and watched the homes of his neighbors charred by the march of tree-high flames.

TOM McCARTHY.

Maybe the sight of a flaming community out there in the Columbian National Forest had something to do with a life spent in the forestry service. For while Axel Lindh, of the Department of Agriculture, is a young man, he's spent his life in forestry work. And when you hear him talk you know that there's scant chance that he'll ever leave it.

"Drama! Man alive! There's drama in those forests," he told me. "And sometimes there's tragedy. But it's something to keep you on your toes.

"Sitting here in Washington it's hard to get the feeling you can get out there in the mountains. It's hard to realize the lives remade, and unmade, in those fires.

• • • •

"IN THAT fire of 1910, in the Columbian National Forest, I think there was a death in nearly every family in the community. But I've seen lives changed overnight by those fires. I've seen stumble-bums walk out of flop houses into the firelines, and I've seen them made over by the experience.

"There's a touch of majesty in fighting a fire. It's something bigger than yourself. I've seen down-and-outers get that feeling. I've seen them remade by it.

"You see, in the old days, before the CCC, we drew from the floating labor markets. We needed men, and we got them any place we could. And we worked fast.

"I'll never forget one trip I made to find men to fight fire. I was sleeping in the mountains, when I was awakened at 3 in the morning and told that fire had broken out in the Clearwater National Forest in Montana. I was told that a plane was waiting for me about 100 miles away to fly me to Spokane, Wash.

"WHAT A TRIP that was! I used horses until I got out to the roads. Drove 18 miles in a Model T. Transferred to a waiting car, and made 62 miles to the airport in less than an hour. The plane was all ready to take off, and I was in Spokane in two hours.

"From the Forest Service warehouse in Spokane I got food supplies for 300 men. Found 300 hundred men in the city's pool halls and flop houses. Loaded them on trains and started back with my cargo on the same day that I'd received the order.

"That's what forest rangers were doing all along the line. While my cargo of men and supplies was speeding from the West toward Heron, Mont., trucks loaded with bedding, pack mules, horses and fire-fighting equipment were roaring out from the East.

"When our men dropped from the train at Heron at 3 in the morning they were given the pack mules and equipment which had come hundreds of miles from the opposite direction. The ranger on duty handed me a map of the forest, assigned an area, and we went to work without pausing for breath. Talk about mobilizing for war!

"Well, that's how we organized to fight forest fire. That's how we brought the men to the scene. But what I started to tell you was what fighting forest fire did to some of the men.

"Often the men used were down-and-outers. They were drifters, without jobs or pride. They hadn't been useful parts of society in years. Then all of a sudden they were lifted out of a flop house and given a man-size job.

"For the first time in years they felt their importance. Communities were depending on them. They arrived at those fires as down-and-outers, and a lot of them went back as men.

"SOMETIMES, though," Lindh said, "forest fires do different things to men. There was a boy I knew named Bill Roe. He was on the fire line with us, and suddenly he got worried about his folks. They didn't live right in the fire area, but there was a chance the flames would sweep around that way.

"Bill headed home to make sure that his mother and dad were all right. He discovered that the wind had changed, and the flames were racing that way! Before he got there he had to run through a half a mile of blazing forest.

"The flames were sweeping down on the house, and Bill's aged parents were standing helplessly by the door. They were too old to run for it. They couldn't run through that flaming half mile of forest.

"Bill figured that he could carry one of his parents to safety, but certainly not both. If they all stayed there, they would all be burned. If he were to carry either his mother or father to safety, one or the other must remain behind, to wait for certain death.

"Bill made his decision," Lindh told me.

I leaned forward expectantly.

"In a minute," said Lindh, "I'll tell you what Bill Roe did. But first you tell me, WHAT WOULD YOU HAVE DONE?"

Police Court Judge Enrolls at G. W. U. As Student of Law

It was the first day of school again for Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran yesterday.

He enrolled at Georgetown University as a law student and started studies for a degree of doctor of judicial science.

Recreation Committee's Luncheon Is Cancelled

Owing to the inability of Sanford Bates, executive director of Boys Clubs, Inc., to be present, the luncheon meeting of the Recreation Committee of the Council of Social Agencies, scheduled for next Wednesday at Wesley Hall, has been cancelled.

The meeting, to which all members of neighborhood council Recreation Committees had been invited, will be held at a later date, according to Marshall Finnan, chairman of the committee.

Reserve Board's Loans 968 Million in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $968,000,000. The week ended yesterday and the total represented a decrease of $14,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $971,000,000.

CocoanutGrove Now Features 'Easy Rhythm'

New York Cast of 20 Including Eddie Daniels Is Presented Here.

By Chanticleer

Cocoanut Grove opened with a bang last night, featuring a New York cast of 20 entertainers, including many faces remembered from last year at the head of the show including Eddie Daniels who last season was swinging a baton for a Meyer Davis unit in Washington. Daniels' rhythmic style of music is called "easy rhythms."

The chorus is comprised of eight Chester Doherty girls. Others on the bill are Mozelle, exotic dance creator; Wellington musicomedy team, and the Three Escorts, a harmony trio. The policy of "never a cover charge" is still in effect for the new season. The last show, incidentally, is at 2 a. m.

The original Log Cabin spot on the Mount Vernon boulevard is featuring chicken dinners these days. That would mean the River Bend. Nice new touch is the practice of inviting audiences to sing while the band lays. Ralph Cannon, George Stein's new vocalist, leads the way. Plenty of fun—the sort you ought to try at least once before saying no.

Sonny Kendis can play "That Old Feeling" and "Caravan" so warmly that they have the effect of two cocktails. That is, if you are at the Pall Mall room. In the Raleigh. Odd, too, because the two t♥es are of opposite types. Real dope behind Maestro Kendis' always-fresh coat-lapel flower is that he keeps the posie in an eye dropper—behind the same lapel.

One of the better revues to come to the Lotus is featured this week—with Don Dade and Dorothy Wardell—just completed a successful tour of South America. At the Theater Casino in Buenos Aires, notably. And only four months ago they were favorites of Shanghai's Ciro's. They include the flirtation waltz, whirlwind, tango and adagio in their bag of tricks. Also on the bill: Samuel Brothers and Fleming, Lillian King, Marion Dawn, Vera Hayes and Lenora's Dancing Debutantes. Buddy Shaner sings with Bill Strickland and his orchestra.

The King Cole room at the Claridge seemed different last night. Reason: Joan English was giving the Sigma Alpha Epsilon boys the benefit of her vocal talents at their banquet, and Bill Barry was forced to do double duty.

Brinkley's continues to report special parties of regular guests dropping in. Jimmy Crandall, boss at the popular Southeast gathering spot, says the old-timers always outnumber the new guests.

• • • •

Robert, the well-known maitre d'hotel at the Shoreham Blue room, is featured in an advertisement appearing in the current issues of Esquire and Vogue magazines. Robert knows celebrities and socialites and is good copy for any magazine. If you care to know, he is assisted by Captains Paul, Ernie, Harry, Heinie and William. Captains to a man.

The Troika opened Tuesday night, in case you are behind with your getting around. You'll find at La Hamilton's pleasant spot these evenings no less than Sasha Bartnovsky's orchestra, Zena and Dena Larena, Emil Wadimoff, Lolik and Orlik and Gypsy Bokal. Artists all, and real Russians.

• • • •

On the Night Club Floors

Peary's D. C. Grandson To Help Unveil Shaft

Cresson, Pa., Oct. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Marie Stafford, daughter of the late Rear Admiral Robert Edwin Peary, will unveil a monument tomorrow in honor of the man who discovered the North Pole. The daughter and her son, Peary Stafford, of Washington, will pull the cord that will uncover the life-size statue erected through the gifts of Cambria County School children near Peary's birthplace.

Lawyer Scores Roosevelt for Ruthless Waste

'God Almighty Couldn't Take on Such a Large Order,' Drayton Says.

President Roosevelt, his latest fireside chat, his proposals for farm and labor legislation and many of his other works, past, present and future, were assailed yesterday by Charles D. Drayton, Washington lawyer, member of the board of education and president of Children's Hospital.

Drayton was the speaker at a luncheon meeting in the Carlton Hotel of the Cosmopolitan Club, a group of Washington business and professional men.

The denunciation of the Administration, one of the warmest delivered in the Capital since the President took office, was applauded by most of the 75 men attending.

Drayton said:

"Again we hear the golden voice (Mr. Roosevelt's) denouncing as 'enemies of democracy' those who dare to say that it is bad for the tranquility of the country to have a special session of Congress . . . If only Congress will screw up its courage enough to forget the billions which have heedlessly, shamelessly and unconstitutionally been placed at the President's sole disposal, and which he ruthlessly uses, in a large part at least, for political purposes, and do what they did last session, kick the living daylights out of the socialistic hodgepodge he is about to lay before them with a 'must' tag!"

Drayton then mentioned the President's trip across the continent—"originally planned to smash opponents of his court-packing plan, but finally timed, some suspect, to divert attention from the Black incident."

"My feeble brain," Drayton said, "refuses to accept the proposition that calm and dispassionate judging of national policies can best be done amid the din and confusion of a cheering multitude. . . .

"It might be well for the President to take a casual glance at the national debt . . . to think in national terms of his obligations to John L. Lewis and the C. I. O. . . . instead of permitting genial Jim Farley to Tammanize the National Government and make a plunderbund of the Civil Service.

"But we are told that the President 'must think not only of this year, but of future years when someone else will be President. The Good Book tells us 'Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof,' but Mr. Roosevelt is ambitious to project himself into future years."

Drayton turned again to the fireside chat and its prophecy that prosperity and peace must be made permanent:

"God Almighty in all the years he has ruled the universe has not been able or has not seen fit to take on such a large order . . . Who can doubt that we now have a synthetic prosperity dependent in large part on the lavish, unprecedented and scandalous expenditures of the last five years . . .?

"At the last session he (the President) almost succeeded in blackmailing Congress into adopting the method he proposed to accomplish his objective of creating a subservient judiciary. He now pretends that an extraordinary session is warranted to attain objectives some of which Congress has already refused to sanction. Although not openly avowed, one of those objectives is likely to be another attempt to pack the court."

Drayton urged his audience to reread the Declaration of Independence with "its challenge to the 'usurpations of the King of England, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these states.'"

Auto Kills Newsboy.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 14.—John Bernard King, 16-year-old newsboy of this city, died at the Frederick City Hospital last night of injuries received several hours earlier when he was struck by an automobile operated by Arthur Stern, Braddock Heights, Md. Stern is being held pending a coroner's inquest.

Embarrassed

LORD DECIES, of Ireland, arrived yesterday aboard the liner Normandie with scores of other passengers. He explained at length to customs officials how his pocket had been picked when he entrained at the Gare St. Lazare. Among the contents of the missing wallet was his passport. After a conference of customs officials Lord Decies was permitted to land.

State May Tax Model Homes At Greenbelt

Investigation Ordered by Commission; County Levy Seen as Possibility.

Baltimore, Oct. 14 (AP).—A possibility that the State of Maryland may levy taxes on the Federal model community at Greenbelt arose today.

Harry O. Levin, chairman of the tax commission, said Michael J. Lindsay, chief supervisor of assessments, has been instructed to investigate the possibility.

The chairman pointed out, however, that the tax commission itself has no authority to levy taxes. He held out the possibility that Lindsay's report might be used by the commissioners of Prince Georges County, in which Greenbelt is located, as the basis for a county levy.

The report also would show whether the low-cost housing project, built by the Federal Government, would be affected by the State real estate tax, he said.

"The Government," said Levin, "says that Greenbelt is not taxable, inasmuch as it is Federal property.

"We feel that there is some merit to the suggestion that, as far as Greenbelt is concerned, the Government is merely in the real estate business. The Supreme Court has held that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is taxable and it may be that Greenbelt is similarly taxable.

"There is sufficient room for this belief to justify an investigation."

Levin made no estimate of the amount at which Greenbelt, located in Prince Georges County, might be assessed.

Windsor Signs To Aid Firm on Tour of World

Writer Says Duke's Work in U. S. Will Be Part of Paid Propaganda.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Oct. 14.—Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., globe-trotting writer, said here today the Duke of Windsor has signed up as a representative of a commercial firm, and in that capacity will start a world tour shortly after Christmas.

"His work naturally will be of a propaganda nature and is in keeping with his plans for world peace," said Vanderbilt, now visiting in southern California.

"Windsor holds to the theory that undernourishment and poor housing conditions are the cause of most internal strife," he said.

The duke and duchess are due here the latter part of November on their American tour.

"I cannot divulge the name of the firm Windsor has contracted to serve," said Vanderbilt, "but I can assure you it definitely has nothing to do with motion pictures."

The Los Angeles Times said it had learned from other sources the details of the duke and duchess' American itinerary, especially in the West. The paper outlined the itinerary as follows:

After arriving in New York the first part of November, the couple will go to Baltimore, later to Philadelphia and then to Chicago.

From Chicago, they will fly to San Francisco and motor to a San Luis Obispo County ranch. Three days later they will come to Los Angeles by automobile and be guests at a Santa Monica Beach home.

Banker Pardoned, Firm to Reopen

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 14 (AP).—Gov. Martin L. Davey graned a full pardon tonight to Kenyon V. Painter, Cleveland banker and big game hunter who had been serving a one to 30-year sentence for misapplication of Union Trust Company funds.

Painter was transferred to a Columbus hospital July 20 for treatment of a heart ailment.

"The Union Trust Company is ready to reopen on a strong and sound basis," the Governor said. "The depositors will be paid in full, so they have not been injured. All the developments indicate the Union Trust Company should never have been closed."

Three Washingtonians are going around today with minds swimming in names, hundreds of them, ranging in dignity from Ajax, Vesta, Sultana and Lady at one extreme to Bum, Jake, Liz and Stilts at the other.

Mailed to The Post's Zoo Names Editor as suggested titles for the animals collected on the recent East Indies expedition led by Dr. William M. Mann, the harvest is now in the hands of Judges Hugh M. Smith, Lucile Q. Mann and W. D. Boutwell.

Most popular of the new accessions, to judge by the volume of name choices, are the giraffes, black leopards, Komodo dragon and the playful pair of Himalayan bear. Next in order were the pair of gaur, the lady orangutan, Chinese alligator, pair of shoebill storks and the pair of pygmy buffalo.

Entrants in the competition, which ended officially at Wednesday midnight, recognized no age barriers. Some were as young as 6, others were grandparents.

Every nomination has been placed before the judges, whose decisions will be made in time for announcement in The Post Sunday.

Rabbi Will Speak Here On Palestine Partition

"The Proposed Partition of Palestine" will be the subject of an address to be delivered to the National Jewish Forum Sunday at 8:15 p. m. by Dr. David de Sola Pool.

Dr. Pool, who is rabbi of the Portuguese Synagogue of New York City, will deliver his address in the Jewish Community Center.

Another Karnak In Missouri Cliff

How an American "Temple of Karnak" is being carved out of a limestone cliff in Missouri was described yesterday to the fall meeting of the industrial minerals division of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, in session at Wardman Park Hotel.

Ralph Smith, research director of the Peerless White Lime Co., said the project, 60 miles south of St. Louis, is purely an industrial mining operation for the production of limestone. It will cover approximately 25 acres and will not be completed—or mined out—at the present rate of production (some 700 tons a day) for another hundred years.

China and World Wait U. S. Action, Dr. Wang States

Speaking before 150 members and guests of the Woman's National Democratic Club, Dr. Chenting T. Wang, Chinese ambassador, last night declared that China and the world "anxiously await" American leadership in imposing the quarantine on aggressor nations recently suggested by President Roosevelt.

Dr. Wang reviewed Sino-American relations during the last 40 years and emphasized the part played by the United States in development of the "open door" principle and in the negotiations leading up to the Nine-Power Treaty.

The Chinese ambassador charged that during 23 of the 26 years of the Chinese republic, Japan harassed China.

He denied that 100,000 communists recently had been mobilized as the Chinese Eighth Route Army.

In introducing Dr. Wang, Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard, club president, said the world cannot afford to lose the 4,000-year-old civilization of China.

Former Policeman Is Arrested in D.C. As Narcotic Pedler

A short debate between Police Court Judge Robert E. Mattingly and Dorothy Kelley, 27, charged with being drunk and disorderly, ended in court yesterday with the prisoner the loser by $20 or 20 days.

After being sentenced to $125 or 120 days on the two charges, she started swearing at the judge. He assessed a contempt fine of $20 or 20 days. The prisoner again swore at the judge and was fined again. After seven such sallies the prisoner grew quiet.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

The Impending Marriage of 'The Kid' Lays Stress On Fleeting Quality of Juvenile Spark of Genius

Jackie Coogan Still Able to Endow Betty Grable With Millions Made in His Baby Days; Strong Bills Booked for National; Radium Starred in Short Reel; More About Edith King; Notes of Theater.

TIME, running truer to form than some of the bangtails pounding the track out at Laurel this month, has been doing a little Grade A fugiting here of late.

According to the news columns of the press, the blonde and agile Miss Betty Grable, come December, when she will be 21, will become the bride of the once fabulous Mr. Jackie Coogan, now 23.

BELL.

It seems much less than two decades ago that Master Coogan startled the picture-going world by making his film debut in the title role of "The Kid," at the baby age of four, and going systematically about the unheard-of business of "stealing the picture" right out from under the supposed supremacy of Mr. Charles Spencer Chaplin's battered derby and bounteous brogans. With an uncanny grasp of the elusive trick of registering tremendous emotional stresses before the cameras, Master Coogan, overnight, took his eternal place among the juvenile prodigies in whom the spark of greatness seemed to shine brightest. His extraordinary precocity subsequently revealed itself in a long line of starring vehicles, among which "Oliver Twist" stands out as next best to "The Kid."

But the unequivocal triumph of "The Kid" was not wholly due to the amazing performance of the inspired Coogan youngster. It was intrinsically a sound exposition of the problems of the underprivileged. In terms that were considerably less blood-chilling, it performed, in its day, a service akin to that now being executed with such crimson vigor by "Dead End" and was the "comedy" which, above all others, centered attention upon its producer's audacity in having dared to superimpose his main title upon the shadow of The Christ carrying the cross up Calvary.

But all that is aside from the point that Jackie Coogan now is a man, about to endow the talented girl of his choice with the millions that have been safeguarded by the courts since the days he earned them as one of the silent cinema's prodigious phenomena. It is a characteristic commentary upon the ephemeral quality of screen greatness that the talking pictures, in which the adolescent Coogan attempted to perpetuate the eminence of his babyhood, effectually doused the flaming talent that had made him the "biggest of the little fellows." Even such theoretically sure-fire subjects as "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn" fell something short of "bringing him back" to the promise of his swaddling clothes days.

So then he took to the boards and made a transcontinental tour with his Betty in that "Hollywood Revue" that was seen a year or two ago on the stage of Loew's Capitol. He was a nice boy, but it was difficult to discover in his clean-cut young manliness any very vivid reminder of "The Kid." Master Coogan since has been largely in eclipse, although Miss Grable has been reasonably prevalent in the gayer of the celluloids —as witness her presence this week with Charles "Buddy" Rogers in the cast of "This Way, Please," on the screen at the Metropolitan.

And now they are to be married. The tweezers, Jeeves, and pluck out those gray hairs creeping in just north of the ears!

Dark weeks, such as this, won't be quite so frequently recurrent at the National Theater from now on, barring, of course, fire, earthquakes and acts of God. Next Monday night, of course, the Lunts will come to town in "Amphitryon 38," an early summer hit when it was tried out on the eager susceptibilities of San Francisco and Los Angeles. The following week, October 25, Charlotte Greenwood will revive old enthusiasms for her distinctive style of comedy in "Leaning on Letty," to which will be appended a brief interval of her enlivening songs and peculiarly droll dances. Following that, there ought to be another gap—but there isn't. The week of November 1 will bring "Tovarich" to E street, and the week after that, November 8, Sam H. Harris' production of "Stage Door," by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber, with Joan Bennett in the role created by Margaret Sullivan, will pop in. If you don't know what an utterly charming young woman Joan Bennett is, you should have seen Walter Wanger's Technicolor production of "Vogues of 1938," when it was on the screen at RKO-Keith's—as too few did. "Stage Door," incidentally, will be coming along on the screen, too, in due course, with Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers and Adolphe Menjou in the pivotal roles. The season, finally, is getting into high.

It was a long time ago, as the crow flies, that this department printed a piece about the difficulties encountered by Pete Smith and his associates in making a short-reel subject dealing with that bafflingly contradictory substance known as radium. Special apparatus had to be devised for handling the tricky stuff and unusual precautions taken against injury to those handling it.

The visible result of all that effort is to be seen at Loew's Palace Theater, on the bill with "The Prisoner of Zenda," the week of Friday, October 22, when "The Romance of Radium" will comprise one of the screen's program's important inclusions.

There is drama in radium and Pete Smith is said to have caught it all.

After witnessing a performance of "Angel Island," George Abbott's newest production, at the Maryland Theater in Baltimore a night or two ago, Stephen E. Cochran, founder of the National Academy of Stage Training, predicts that Mr. Abbott will wake up one of these fine mornings to discover that he has another Broadway hit on his hands. This new mystery play was written by Bernie Angus, popular detective story writer. Mr. Cochran cites the fact that he picked "Three Men on a Horse" as a hit that couldn't miss as proof of his infallibility as a histrionic handicapper. No dice. So did everybody else—which pays him off for rapping me across the knuckles for not remembering in yesterday's paragraph that Edith King, coming to the National Monday night with the Lunts in "Amphitryon 38," was leading woman with his National Theater Players 'way back there when Roger Pryor was leading man. Their best joint job was in his revival of David Belasco's "Girl of the Golden West," in which Miss King played the Blanche Bates role.

This is a "command performance"—the first of the year's six by the same adult company in the same place . . . That Washington engagement of the Abbey Theater Irish Players from Dublin seems to be constantly receding . . . Their "The Far-Off Hills" has just been extended through this week and all of next at the Ambassador Theater in New York . . . Dorothy married and quit the stage for good—if that is what it was—but Hannah still hankers . . . The Montgomery Players will give a "preview" performance of "Big Hearted Herbert," their opening production of the new season, at the Red Cross Center of Walter Reed Hospital tonight . . . Regular public performance at Leland Junior High School tomorrow night at 8:30 . . . In addition to its week at the Earle, beginning today, "The Life of Emile Zola" will be presented at the Ambassador Theater from Sunday through Friday of next week . . . Boles Hungarian In Latest Film

John Boles sings a love song in Hungarian to Ida Lupino in his new starring feature, "Fight for Your Lady." Most of the action of the picture takes place in Budapest.

For a number of weeks, Boles spent his leisure hours working with a Hungarian tutor mastering the song, "All Alone."

Adolphe Menjou Once Farm Hand

Adolphe Menjou, the sophisticate, the pattern of sartorial elegance, once worked as a farm hand. It happened the year after he was graduated from Cornell as a mechanical engineer. But he couldn't get a job as such.

So the polished actor of today now starring with Katharine Hepburn and Ginger Rogers in "Stage Door" went to work on a New York farm, where he pitched hay, milked cows and fed chickens. Later he abandoned plans for an engineering career and turned to the stage.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Oct. 14.—About five minutes before my radio broadcast last Friday night, I received a mysterious telephone call—a tip-off that Greta Garbo had just committed suicide. A quick check-up revealed that the report was untrue—as untrue as the other umpteen telephone calls that I have had in the past few weeks, announcing Hollywood tragedies. Two weeks ago, some hysterical woman called to tell me that William Powell had died suddenly on the set. A man's voice informed me the other day that Bette Davis was dying of sunstroke. When Jeanette MacDonald and Gene Raymond sailed for Honolulu, some excitable person who refused to give his name telephoned to report that they had quarreled and that Gene had jumped overboard and drowned.

WILLIAM POWELL.

Hollywood police tell me that after the death of any great star —in this case, Jean Harlow—there is always an epidemic of such telephone calls. In several cases they have traced the calls, questioned their authors and invariably found them to be mentally unbalanced neurotics who seem to derive a ghoulish glee from causing fear and sorrow. They worst offender on their records terrorized Hollywood for weeks by calling, not the press, but the relatives of the star to report the fictitious tragedy.

On one or two occasions the wild rumors have made the headlines. Wallace Beery, for instance, had the experience of picking up a newspaper and seeing in giant type the story of his own death in an airplane crash. He tells me that it gave him a very strange feeling. My own "strange feeling" is just plain rage.

On the set the other day with Jack Holt when he staged a knock-down and drag-out fight with the villain of the picture, Jack La Rue—the esthetic looking chap who made his first great screen hit as the priest in "Farewell to Arms." There was nothing esthetic about La Rue's brand of rough-and-tumble fighting. Jack Holt finished the scene with two broken ribs. La Rue, plenty worried, helped him to his feet and asked anxiously if he were badly hurt. Jack gingerly felt his injured side. "You know, you were a great success as a peaceful priest," he said, between groans. "What a pity you didn't stick to that characterization."

Meet Ray Milland, clever fellow! A few days ago, on the set, the director ordered him to play a scene in a deluge of rain. Ray objected—he had on a new suit; who would pay for it? After a few moments of heated argument, the director lost patience and sent his assistant on the run to the business office to get Ray a studio check for the full price of the togs. And with the check in hand, Ray blissfully walked into the artificial downpour and played the scene.

Today I met him on the boulevard, wearing the same old suit. It had been pressed and it looked as good as new. "You ought to see the knockout I bought with that check I high-jacked out of Paramount," he grinned.

I watched Joy Hodges play her first big dramatic scene. It required such a nicely shaded bit of emotional acting that a veteran actress would have been nervous; Joy, not yet a veteran, was paralyzed with fear. The director tried to soothe her nerves, talked patiently to her and shot take after take. It looked like disaster —Joy went through it like a condemned man climbing the thirteen fatal steps. Finally, just as the director was ready to give up hope, a messenger boy brought a telegram for "Miss Hodges." Joy read it and—suddenly — the tears that had refused to flow streamed down her cheeks. "Let's make another take," she said quietly—and played the scene magnificently. The wire was from her best friend, Irene Hervey. It read: "Go ahead, Joy, you can do it!"

Lily Pons Defends Scanty Attire Against Caustic Attack of Maestro.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Oct. 14.—Lily Pons, who wears skirts when she sings in opera and a brassiere and panties of feathers, which tickle, in the movies, told critics of the latter apparel today to go wrap themselves in a mother-hbbard.

Miss Pons clothing controversy started when she took off her operatic robes and donned three ounces of feathers and a generous coating of talcum powder to play the lead in "Hitting a New High."

Nobody complained—in fact, everyone admired—until Pietro Cimini, the celebrated symphony orchestra maestro, left his podium in San Francisco for a tour of the studios. To his amazement he discovered Miss Pons, in her feathers, standing on top of a white piona and singing the Polonaise from "Mignon."

She had an appreciative audience of Jack Oakie, Edward Everett Horton and numerous other folks, except Cimini. He wasn't appreciative. He said:

"Putting opera in tights seems unnecessary undignified, and breaking faith with the opera."

A voice-Versa Case.

She said furthermore that she makes a point of wearing whatever costume, o rlack thereof. Called for by the part she is playing. If the script says overcoat, she wears an overcoat ,and of course, vice-versa. Her current role is one of those vice-versa cases.

"I wear feathers in this picture, but i fthe picture was an opera, "I'd wear feathers on the stage, too," she said. "And what of it?

"Why I remember when Mary Garden playe din 'Salome.' She didn't even have feathers and she was critivized all over the world. But I noticed one very important thing. The opera house was filled every night."

Miss Pons added that she feared the critical maestro had failed to take a good, long look at her. He must have been thinking of the old days when opera stars were paid according to their girth.

"They wouldn't have dared to appear in a costume like mine," Lily said. "It would have been indecent."

Stars Need Slapstick.

Another note on dignity, undignified, comes from Ernst Lubitsch, the director, who predicts that one of these days Greta Garbo may be forced to take a custard pie in the face or tumble in a mud puddle, for the sake of a laugh.

Lubitsch, who is about to start on the comedy, "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," with Gary Cooper and Claudette Colbert, said he believed all the leading stars would be forced to play slapstick, if the current vogue for broad farce continues.

"It's not such a bad idea, either," he continued. "I believe any of our leading actresses would be more fondly remembered for flopping in a mud puddle, than for any romantic scer any of them ever have attempted.

"Garbo in the arms of Robert Taylor has its possibilities, but think of being bale to tell your grandchildren that you went to the world premiere of the film in which Garbo dropped in the drink. It would make history."

Mushrooms Dididn't Mush.

Lubitsch, incidentally, has given up mushroom culture in his magnificently-carved desk. When he first arrived in Hollywood from Europe he was assigned a beautiful office, with a tremendous desk, whose savernous drawers were of no earthly use to him.

He filled them with dirt and mushroom spawn and waited for nature to take its course. It didn't. It must have been the varnish, Lubitsch thinks.

He's got a new desk now, and it's full of papers and cigar boxes and whatnot, just like any American's, thus proving that eventually anybody, even Lubitsch, succumbs to big business' way of doing things.

Sally Eilers Leads Prison Film Cast

Sally Eilers has been signed to head the cast of "Condemned Women," which Producer Robert Sisk will send before cameras late this month with Lew Landers directing. Miss Eilers recently finished "Danger Patrol" for the same studio.

Lee Patrick, popular Brodway comedienne who recently signed a long-term controct, also will have one of the top roles in the new picture. Miss Patrick left Hollywood for New York a few days ago but will return in time for the start of the film.

Actor-Artist.

In Master Film on Earle Screen

Landon Sought For Chairman Of Republicans

Landon as chairman could be counted on, it is further argued, to thwart any ambitions Herbert Hoover might still cherish in that direction.

Thus there would be healed one of the sore spots in the Republican Party which is proving an obstacle to harmony and united action. The second advantage of the scheme would be to give the party an excellent organizer, who could speak for the party with authority. Landon won his political spurs as State chairman of Kansas Republicans and as an organizer.

Considerable dissatisfaction with the energetic, red-haired Hamilton exists within the Republican Party. He is held to be a bad organizer and executive, and in substantiation of that contention the chaotic condition of Republican headquarters in the last campaign is cited.

Friend of the Wealthy.

Another criticism heard regarding Hamilton is that he spends too much of his time with the wealthy element of the Republican Party. Hamilton's friends defend him against that charge on the ground his chief job at the moment is to reduce the large party deficit, and that the money had to come from those who have it.

Yet the progressive wing of the Republican Party has never been enamored of Hamilton. Until he became Landon's preconvention campaign manager, they assert, he always was definitely allied with the ultra-conservative elements in the party. It is also pointed out that he was trained in politics by the late Dave Mulvane, Old Guard Republican leader of Kansas.

Hamilton was elected to the national committee chairmanship with the votes of the Landon wing of the party, but many Landonites seem to have soured on him—and his apparent willingness to go along with Herbert Hoover's plan for a mid-term convention next spring has not helped him with his old friends. Hamilton, on the other hand, holds the mid-term convention is a matter to be decided by the national committee at its November 5 meeting in Chicago.

The impasse between Landon and Hoover over the holding of a party convention next year still continues. Indeed, the conflict is now beginning to reach down into the party ranks, with emissaries from each of these titular leaders of the party seeking o influence the Republican incumbents in House and Senate.

Opposes Mid-Term Parley.

Hoover is aggresively sponsoring the mid-term convention idea. Landon believes it lacks feasibility and may injure the party. He is opposed to holding such a convention if the objective is to issue only a general declaration of principles, such as a belief in the Constitution and the worth of the country. On the other hand, he feels that to deal with current issues in detail at this time would place many Republican candidates seeking Senate and House seats in a straitjacket.

Consequently the Landon position is that the mid-term convention should not be held unless it is favored by the sitting Republicans in House and Senate—the men who must run next year. As far as can be learned, House Republican Leader Bertrand H. Snell is the only Capitol Hill Republican to have expressed himself in favor of the Hoover plan. As an alternative, Landon has proposed creation of a party policy committee consisting of himself, Hoover, Senator Vandenberg, Senator William E. Borah, Col. Frank Knox, the party Vice Presidential candidate last year, Senate Republican Leader Charles L. McNary and Snell.

Hoover's Activity.

Although Landon's opposition to the mid-term convention idea is based on other grounds, some of the hostility has been inspired by a suspicion Hoover is using this proposal as a vehicle to promote his chances for renomination. In Republican circles recently there has been much talk that both Hoover and Landon should issue unequivocal statements renouncing further preferment at the hands of the party.

On the other hand, it is held to be embarrassing to call on either man to declaim formally he no longer aspires to the Presidency. Landon's close friends assert he abandoned all such aspirations last November and that his crushing defeat last year, when he lost even his home State of Kansas, makes a statement to that effect unnecessary.

Hoover's friends likewise assert he has no 1940 ambitions. But the activity of some of them seems to refute this contention. When a former Cabinet officer of Hoover mails out letters which subtly project the suggestion that the former President is still available Presidential timber, it is a natural assumption that what he is doing is agreeable to his old chief.

Thus, it is argued that if Landon were named national committee chairman, his acceptance of such a post would be notice he had no personal ambitions and placed the party's welfare above other considerations. At the same time those fearful of Hoover re-emerging as the party standard-bearer would feel, it is contended, Landon would be a sufficient check against the former President's ambitions.

'Can't Satisfy Both Factions,' NLRB Replies

Board Calm Under Bitter Attacks; Cites Huge Membership Gains.

of this right against interference by employers.

"That this right is now being widely and freely exercised is demonstrated by the figures made public at the current conventions.

"These figures show that in the past year, during only half of which labor has had the benefit of the Supreme Court decisions sustaining the act, about 4,000,000 workers have joined the ranks of the two organizations."

Take Judicial Stand.

The board's statement emphasized the judicial neutrality which Chairman J. Warren Madden has consistently outlined as the board's policy. Informed observers have noted repeatedly that what critics have termed the board's partiality to the C. I. O. has actually arisen from the fact that the C. I. O. has been far more successful than the A. F. of L. in company elections where the board has ordered such polls.

Occasionally the federation's workers have shown a majority, however, and the C. I. O.'s Atlantic City criticism of the board naturally reflected that organization's ire at such results.

The careful wording of the statement was significant in its restraint, as it clearly avoided a reply in the full sense to the impassioned attacks by federation leaders in the present Denver convention, and the less fiery-worded assaults on it in the C. I. O.'s Atlantic City conclave. In this manner the board re-emphasized its position as a judicial body.

Ignores A. F. L. Demand.

No reference was made to the federation demand that Congress amend the Wagner act to keep the board out of inter-union disputes, and to compel it to conduct collective bargaining elections by crafts in plants where more than one craft is employed. The Washington reaction to the demand generally is that only a Congressional minority is likely to take the argument seriously.

The opinion is also generally held here, in line with the board's implied invitation to the warring organizations to make peace, that the Green-Lewis factions will find a modus operandi somehow—before the next Congressional elections—by which "face" will be saved and through which the 8,000,000 labor votes can be swung solidly behind candidates friendly to labor.

O'Connor Acts To Rush Wages And Hours Bill

Appeals to House Rules Committee to Break Deadlock.

in official Washington on the speed with which Mr. Roosevelt's five-point agenda may be acted on. Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, returning to New York yesterday on the liner Rex, breathed only optimism.

"It looks like we will get the farm-control bill, wages and hours legislation, Government reorganization, regional planning and strengthening of the antitrust laws out of the way by Christmas," Barkley told the Associated Press in New York.

"I knew the President would call us if the farm-control legislation seemed urgent. It will shorten the regular session very decidedly, and I am sure everyone wants a shorter session, although it must not be shortened inconsistently with legislative needs."

Opposes Tax Increase.

Like Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, Barkley declared against any increase in taxes. He said passage of the Government reorganization bill should aid economy prospects.

"We are making an honest effort to curtail expenses, and if the Government reorganization bill is put through, approximately 130 emergency agencies will be centralized," said Barkley.

Barkley may return to Washington today, or proceed immediately to Kentucky, where he has speaking engagements.

Meantime, new committee activity was manifest in every quarter of the Capitol, as Congress prepared to return to work.

Chairman Fred M. Vinson, of the special House Tax sub-committee, sent letters to sub-committee members calling them to meet on the proposed tax revision bill on November 4. Vinson made clear it may take weeks and even months to prepare the new tax bill, and it probably will not come up in the House before the regular session.

Further cushions in the undistributed earnings tax, modification of the capital gains and losses tax, possible revision of the income tax and excise taxes appeared in the cards, but in any case leaders have said it will be revision designed for tax equity, and may not increase the total volume of taxes.

O'Connor last night predicted the wages and hours bill will pass the House "without more than 75 votes against it." He favors two or three days House debate on the bill, with opportunity for amendment.

IN APPRECIATION of Zola

WE TAKE this opportunity to thank everyone connected with the production of "The Life of Emile Zola".

The acclaim which has greeted every engagement of this picture belongs to Mr. Muni and his fellow players, to Warner Bros., to Director William Dieterle, to the writers, to the nameless and numberless studio workers and technicians who gave their share in its shaping.

To all and each of them goes our heartfelt gratitude and appreciation, as well as to every member of every audience who has cheered the screen miracle these workers have wrought.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl's Family Frowns on Boy She Loves Because of His Occupation; Should She Marry Him Anyway?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Four years ago when I was 15 I started going "steady" with a fine boy of 21. He was a cab driver, although his father had been a bank president, and his mother a wealthy woman, until the depression wiped out everything they had. They came to Washington to live. Now his elder brother has a splendid job with a nationally known company in another city. I tell you these things to show that the boy is not a run-of-mine cab driver.

* * * *

After three years, mother started objecting to my going out with a "cab driver." Last year she and my aunts (who have helped take care of me since my father died) begged me to give him up and go with other boys. They hadn't a thing against him except his occupation. They couldn't have; for he's clean cut, honest, hard-working and ambitious. And since I first met him, he had worked his way up until he owns stock in the company, makes $60 a week and is an inspector and boss of the drivers. He still drives a cab, but not to carry passengers, only to do his supervisory work.

* * * *

I did give him up, even though I loved him. During the past year we have gone out together only occasionally. Last summer, a niece of his employer's came to Washington to visit, and the employer gave this boy money and the use of his car to take her nice places, as he felt too old to show her about. (I was out of town at the time, but we hadn't been going together regularly when I left.) Although his employer knows me and likes me a lot, I'm sure he'd like nothing better than to see his niece married to his favorite employe, who is to take his place when he retires. This boy likes the niece very much but says he'll never love anyone as he loves me. I believe him and feel the same way. If I lived with my father and mother I'd never have consented to give him up, but after all my aunts had done for me, I hated to hurt them.

* * * *

I graduated from high school last summer and am now working and going to business school at night. I will soon be 19. If this boy were content to be a cab driver all his life, it might be different; but since he has come up, since he does have a good background and since we do sincerely love each other, don't you think I should marry him? It's not as if I had never known other boys. I'm considered a popular girl and have plenty of boy friends, but none to compare to him. Please tell me what to do and I promise to take your advice. I read your column every day and never have I thought you have given a wrong answer.
Sincerely, UNHAPPY.

A Serious Problem.

DEAR UNHAPPY: This is a serious problem—to be most gravely considered. I am reluctant to second your impulse to marry this young man—just now, at any rate. My reluctance, however, has nothing to do with his manner of occupation or your family's snobbish objection to it. In my opinion, he showed real worth in making the most of an honest, if unpretentious, opportunity in time of emergency, and in elevating the job to the level of his intelligence and capabilities. He is more to be admired than if he had rested on the family's past prestige, waiting without guarantee for a more impressive-sounding profession to receive him.

* * * *

It is the fact that you are scarcely more than a school girl, with all the social inexperience and lack of knowledge of life and self that such half growth implies, which inclines me to believe you should wait a few years before marrying. If you were 23, say; and had known other men—and I mean men, not boys—as suitors, and still felt there was only this one man in the world for you, then I might believe you were justified in marrying him even in the face of your family's objection.

* * * *

I have a hunch this young man appeals to you more because of what he represents than because of what he himself is. Denied a father's reassuring companionship, brought up in a household of women, it may be that you yearn unwarely toward the solidarity of a grown man's affectionate, protective interest. It may be this chap appealed to you in the first place principally because he was years older, had assumed a man's responsibility in the world, was a forceful, self-sufficient hard-working "go-getter" and in sharp contrast, as such, to your other high-school-age beaux. Or it could be that early sorrow and sacrifice has matured you, in some aspects, beyond your years, so that it takes a responsible-minded man to speak your language.

* * * *

Though you care for him and though he seems to be an essentially decent and dependable individual, the hazard in marrying him hastily (and by that I mean before you are around 23 years of age) is this: it will not be the mature you who is marrying. You haven't the faintest idea whether he is the right mate for the woman you are to become. If he were just your own age, you might possibly develop together along the same lines. As it is, his life pattern is already rather definitely established. Yours is as definitely nebulous.

* * * *

Five years from now you might still feel the kindliest affection for him; might still admire and respect him, yet see clearly that marriage to him would have been a great mistake, for the reason that your gradually crystallizing character, personality, tastes, talents, all dictated a vastly different type of man for your husband and the father of your children.

* * * *

At the risk of losing this man to his employer's niece, I believe you should think long and well before accompanying him to the altar. I believe you should know him in contrast to other men engaging with equal success in other types of occupational and professional pursuits before saying definitely: "He is the man." I believe you should complete your business schooling and become altogether independent of your family, financially, before marrying anyone. I believe you should give yourself time to evolve from the virtual school girl you are today into the level headed young woman you unquestionably will be a few years hence, before singing your life away in the name of love. For that, my dear child, is what marriage amounts to.

Tomorrow's Program.

For three years woman has known, and "dearly loves," a man who has confessed his love for her and has asked her to "wait" for him. Shortly after confessing his love, however, his work took him 3,000 miles away. That was several months ago, and she hasn't heard a word from him since. Should she continue to wait? she asks. Her question will be answered here tomorrow.

Crawford's New Clothes.

Adrian has designed some interesting and fascinating clothes for Joan Crawford, movie star, and combined some unusual fabrics. He combines black velvet with blue silk for an afternoon dress, the tricolors of the French flag for a tailored suit with a matching hat. The suit is collarless, with a belted waistline and silver military buttons for decoration.

The Greek Influence in Fall Coiffures

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

TO harmonize with the new silhouette, coiffures have undergone a radical change. The latest ideas in smart hair styling stress the illusion of a small head, with the nape of the neck uncovered, and soft curls mounted high on top. The finished effect, according to reports from Paris, is that of compactness and balance, with a definite upward movement.

For daytime, the coiffure may be styled a bit lower than for evening—but all formal coiffures must be noted for height, if one is to follow the dictates of the mode, and echo the fashion trends in clothes. No evening "hair do" is complete this season without an ornament of some kind accenting the lines of the coiffure. Rhinestones, feathers, aigrets or ostrich are the predominating accessories in this realm, as sponsord by Paris hair stylists.

The unique coiffure shown here was designed in Paris by Robert, of Washington, especially for the French film star, Mlle. Myno Burney, in connection with the hairdressers' convention in Paris. Mr. Robert has gone to the old Greeks for inspiration and created a hair style that is distinctively different and flattering. It is, he says, an ideal accompaniment for the Directoire clothes so much in evidence in the formal evening mode this season, and reminiscent of the coiffure called "a la Titus" worn in 1789. According to the Washington creator of this clever coiffure, it is especially becoming to blondes, although an adaptation also has been designed for the brunette.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORKER

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 14.

THE GREATEST need of our jam-packed, cliff-dwelling American cities—greater even than odorless cabbage—is in a fair way to being fulfilled.

A few days ago this huge town was frenzied with excitement over the arrival in our midst of a pair of "barkless dogs!"

ALICE HUGHES.

These pooches originate in the Congo, and what difference does a bark make in that region? Technically, they are known as "Barkless Besengi," are chestnut in color, stand 18 inches at the shoulder when full grown, and don't bark. It isn't that the little loves don't like to bark, or are stubborn and won't. It is physiologically impossible, though vets haven't yet discovered why. But B. Hamilton Rogers has installed a pair, mama and papa, at a Westchester kennel, and we all hope that soon America will be filled with barkless wonders!

I interviewed the Besengi on their triumphant way through town.

"Then their bite is worse than their bark," I assumed.

"Oh, yes; they can bite." I was told. "They can growl softly, too. In fact, they make fine watch dogs, as they have the burglar by the ankle before he knows there's a dog for miles."

This was not so good, and I tried no pranks with the Besengi. But they do fulfill one of any city's greatest requirements—a large mess of canine silence! Oh, if my Murray Hill courtyard had only Barkless Besengi!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—A gorgeous girl named Barbara Bannister was punched in one of her beautiful eyes by a local gentleman a few nights ago, and soon it was all colors. When the gentleman was haled to court next morning Miss Bannister, wearing dark cheaters, said she would forgive the striker if he humbly apologized. He did, instantly, and the law was called off. But beauteous Betty's orb was still a nawsty mess, and never did I hear of a gent getting off so easily for blacking a lady's eye. Did you? . . .

Local store folk unrolled the red plush carpets to welcome to our shores Mr. H. Gordon Selfridge, the American who went to London 31 years ago and opened a department store which is now one of the wonders of the Mother Country. About a year ago Selfridge became a subject of His Majesty. Now our people are knocking themselves out doing the honors for the visiting fireman . . .

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Drugs Are Standardized.

The days of nasty medicinces are over. The old nauseous mixtures have given way to elegant pharmacy, so that taking medicine is even a pleasure—too much of a pleasure, perhaps, for some people.

And even more important, the days of unreliable medicine have gone. Drugs are tested and checked up over and over again. They are standardized by trying them out on animals to see that they are potent—that they will do what they are supposed to do. And the modern pharmacist is a thoroughly educated, well-trained expert in elegant and accurate compounding.

Repulsive Mixtures.

The mixtures of the old physicians were curious and repulsive—scraping from the bodies of athletes, mixed with the oil with which they anointed themselves, were used as a tonic. The hair of a man torn from the cross was a remedy for fever. All kinds of strange animals were used in some of their organs or parts for medicinal agents—the hyena, crocodile, chameleon, lion, elephant, camel and hippopotamus.

Toads and snakes naturally attracted these practitioners, who were more superstitious than learned. The toad is mentioned in "Macbeth:"

"Toad that under cold stone
Days and nights hast thirty-one
Sweltered venom sleeping got."

The idea was that the best time to get the toad's venom was after it had lain dormant a month, besides the advantage of catching him napping was that he would have no time to get rid of the poisonous or medicinal principle contained in his skin.

Stories of Toads.

The story was that King John was poisoned by a friar who dropped a toad in his wine, but a very curious story is that of a wicked Italian woman whose husband was dying of dropsy. He took so long about it that she got tired and thought to hurry the process by putting a toad in his wine, so that he would drink the liquid and die. He did so, but to her astonishment and disgust, he completely recovered.

Fifty years ago that story would have been scouted as mythical, but we know now that the skin of a toad secretes a drug which has an action very like the famous heart remedy, digitalis, which was introduced into medicine as a remedy for dropsy.

In 1911, Drs. Abel and Mocht, two experts in pharmacology, secured from the dried secretion of the salivary gland of a tropical toad, bufa agua, a substance they called "bufagen." Injected into animals, it increased the tone of the heart muscle, and the strength of the heart's contraction. There is one large pharmacal laboratory where experiments on toad medicines have been going on for some years. As yet the drug has not been introduced into general practice, but the work done shows us that the ideas of the old-time alchemists can be revised and adapted to modern uses.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

PHYSICAL training is a subject with an appeal as international as Esperanto. Last year we adapted ourselves to the German rhythmic exercises which induce relaxation, and this year it's exercise from the Yoga, to discipline mind and body. Whatever the original purpose of these exercises, they are all grist to the mill of the American woman bent on streamlines.

The Yogic exercises, however, seem particularly well suited to our needs. They are not strenuous in the sense that they demand vigorous action, and they stretch the muscles. They are called "postures" rather than "exercises," and therein lies the principal difference between calisthenics, East and West. You may repeat an exercise 10 to 25 times, but when you assume a posture you hold it anywhere from a few second to half an hour.

As a matter of record, these postures are not entirely new to us. Maureen O'Sullivan, who claims to be the most unathletic of movie stars, has long relied on the Yoga postures for exercise and relaxation. This young star loses weight easily when working intensely, and she finds the quieting effects of the Yoga exercises an excellent antidote for the strain of a heavy program.

She suggests the "bow," which is also a favorite with Jessica Dragonette, the radio star:

POSITION: Lie flat on the floor on the face.

MOVEMENT: Now, take this position, and try to hold it: Flex the knees and raise the trunk backward so that the hands grasp the feet. Hold the position until you begin to feel a slight strain, then relax slowly. Eventually you will be able to grasp the ankles and to hold the position for several seconds.

The bow is splendid exercise for the muscles of the throat, shoulders, arms, stomach and even the buttocks. It makes you flexible.

POSTURE: Sit down on the floor, cross-legged. Then try to place the right foot on the left thigh and the left foot on the right thigh, soles of feet turned up. The chest, neck and head should be in a straight line. The position is somewhat on the order of the Buddha pose. To complete the picture, bend the elbows and hold the hands horizontally out from the shoulders, with palms turned up. Or, you may place the hands, palms turned up and laid one on top of the other, in front of the abdomen, so that they rest on the thighs. The aim is to be able to tuck the feet on top of the thighs and maintain the position. This posture is excellent for the tummy muscles.

There is, as you see, more than one way to take your exercise, and the Yogic poses are excellent discipline for unruly muscles.

Yogic postures are effective exercise.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Washingtonians won't have to wait until the Windsors get here to start entertaining distinguished visitors. Today, and within the next few days, there will be a regular influx of celebrities whose names will make social news, and other news, as long as they are here.

HOPE R. MILLER.

One of the most prominent statesmen scheduled to arrive soon is the former Minister of Foreign Affairs of Finland, Hjalmar Johan Procope, whose name has a special significance for persons who have followed his achievements in improving the situation in northern Europe and at the League of Nations in recent years.

A noted politician and economist, Mr. Procope has served his country in a number of capacities since he became minister of commerce in 1920. A few years later he was appointed minister of foreign affairs, subsequently was made Minister to Warsaw, and later became minister of foreign affairs again.

But the position that plunged him most definitely into the international picture was his representation of Finland at the League of Nations Council, a body of which he eventually was made president. Since then he has represented his country at two highly important meetings, the World Economic Conference and the Inter-Parliamentary Commission, and his activity at each of these has done much toward increasing the international prestige of Finland.

Also Noted As a Writer

In addition to laurels he has won as a statesman, Mr. Procope also has achieved an enviable place as a writer on subjects centered around trade treaties and the international situation as it affects countries of northern Europe.

On this, his second, trip to America the former minister of foreign affairs will be a guest at the Finnish Legation. The Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt will entertain in his honor at a tea on Tuesday afternoon, and a number of other functions will be given for him during his visit.

Belgian Army Team To Arrive Today

Attention of sporting society is, of course, centered on the Belgian Army team, which will arrive this afternoon at Union Station while the United States Army band plays the national anthems of Belgium and America, and a distinguished party is on hand to greet the visitors.

Only one member of the team, Lieut. Ferdinand Poswick, will have his wife with him. Others in the group are Capitaine Commandant Chevalier Henri de Menten de Horne, Lieut. Paul Mondron, and Lieut. Ives van Strydonck.

With a constant round of sports and social activities planned for the team, chances are the horsemen will return to Belgium believing Americans live in a whirl of parties, hunts and horseshows. Tonight they will make their initial "radio appearance," and tomorrow they will hear the sound of huntsmen's horns at the Fairfax Hunt in the Virginia hills.

Their social calendar from then on is about as full as it can be—what with the luncheon to be given by the D. C. Commissioners, the luncheons, teas, dinners and the tea dance to be given on Wednesday afternoon by the commanding officer, officers and ladies of Fort Myer in honor of the visiting team.

Susan Ertz Expected Tomorrow

Susan Ertz, noted novelist, is scheduled to arrive in Washington tomorrow to visit her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. C. Coleridge Ertz at their home, 3220 Connecticut avenue.

Having heralded Miss Ertz' expected visit so frequently in the past two weeks, I hesitate to go into details about her now; but fact is, it has been such a long time since a topflight woman writer has been here, I want to make the most of it. I noticed a recent reference to her as "a British novelist," but evidently it was made by someone who did not know her parents were American, and that she has spent much of her life in this country. In private life, Miss Ertz is Mrs. J. Ronald McCrindle, wife of a London barrister who is manager and director of the British Airways.

Congress Chiefs Arrive in U. S. For Extra Duty

With news of the extra session of Congress on November 15 sounding a kneel to Congressional vacations, many Senators and Representatives who were abroad are crowding back into Washington via New York.

On the Rex, which arrived yesterday, was Senator Allen W. Barkley, majority leader. Only a few piers away the Washington docked with Senator Joseph F. Guffey, of Pennsylvania; Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., of Wisconsin; Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, and Representative Luther A. Johnson, of Texas.

A large slice of our diplomatic corps also arrived on the Washington, namely Robert Frazer, United States Minister to El Salvador; George A. Makinson, consul general at Kobe, and Mrs. Makinson and Homer Brett, United States Consul General at Lima, Peru, and Mrs. Brett.

Visiting celebrities who reached New York yesterday included H. G. Wells, who arrived on the Washington and who soon will give a lecture in Washington; Emil Ludwig, who is returning to this country to do more research for a forthcoming book, and Michael Astor, son of Lord and Lady Astor.

Mrs. Archibald Dinner Hostess

Mrs. Robert J. Archibald, wife of Capt. Archibald, U. S. M. C., entertained at a dinner at the Shoreham Blue Room last evening for Miss Mary Sasscer, whose marriage to Joseph George, of Atlanta, will take place tomorrow at the home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Reverdy Sasscer, of Upper Marlboro, Md.

The guests, most of whom are to be members of the bridal party, included Mr. and Mrs. Lowell W. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Cooksey, of Baltimore; Miss Helen Sasscer, Miss Edith Merrill, Miss Charlotte Gough, Beale Sasscer, Reverdy Sasscer, jr., Harold Sasscer, William Prudden, and Edward Rothrock.

Another prenuptial dinner party at the Shoreham last evening was that given by Mr. and Mrs. George Hamilton McNeill, of Morehead City, N. C., for Mr. McNeill's sister, Miss Frances McNeill, who also will be married tomorrow. Her fiance is Joseph Davidson Easley, son of Dr. and Mrs. Philip S. Easley, of St. Louis.

Mrs. J. M. Gold, of Reidsville, N. C., was among the out-of-town guests at the dinner.

Engagement Announced.

Mrs. Bertha Darby, of Kensington, Md., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Vera Cosma Darby, to Dr. William D. Fisher, of Grafton, W. Va., son of Mrs. Rhea A. Fisher. The wedding will take place October 30 at the home of the bride-to-be.

Her Engagement Announced Today

Bachrach.

Miss Margaret Ayers, daughter of William A. Ayers, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, and the late Mrs. Ayers, whose engagement to William Frederick Weigester, of Washington, formerly of Troy, Pa., is announced by her father today. The wedding will take place this winter. Mr. Weigester is the son of William Weigester and the late Mrs. Weigester.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

"DID YOU EVER ACT all those plays you took with you to Moscow?" we asked Signora Augusto Rosso yesterday at Enid Snow's tea in her honor. The former Mrs. Wilkinson Bunker ordered quite a stack of amateur dramas from New York before sailing to France for her marriage to Italian Ambassador Rosso last winter, thinking they might help to pass the Moscow evenings away.

DUDLEY HARMON.

"We never did get around to it," she confessed. "The winter was quite gay, and we had an early spring which kept most of us outdoors. But I'm holding them in reserve for next winter." Signora Rosso said yesterday that she adored Moscow, although it wasn't as gay as Washington by any means, and that all the entertaining was done in the diplomatic corps. "The Soviet officials haven't much time for big parties" she explained. "Their minds are on more important things."

The wife of the Italian Ambassador to Russia was completely surrounded yesterday by friends who hadn't seen her since she left Washington last winter. She looked particularly smart in a black frock shot with metal thread, a matching hat, and a corsage of orchids, and sat most of the time on a sofa in the living room while everybody came up to pay his or her respects.

AMONG THOSE WHO dropped in during the afternoon were the Norwegian Minister, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne; the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, and numerous other members of the Diplomatic Corps, including Herbert Scholz, of the German Embassy—the attractive Lelo, his wife, lands in New York a week from today after a vacation in Europe; Charles Ritchie, Third Secretary of the Canadian Legation, and Philip Broad, of the British Embassy. Larry Bungardeanu, of the Rumanian Legation, was saying farewells all around, since he leaves tomorrow for a hunting trip in the Adirondacks, where he will stay with the son of the late Robert Chambers, well-known novelist.

Others there were Mrs. Pearsons Rust, in black with sables; Frau Thomsen, wife of the Counselor of the German Embassy; Frau Blankenorn, wife of another German diplomat, who recently returned after a vacation in Europe; Sandy and Priscilla Liggett, Bill Briggs; Nancy Mann, in black; Robert Coe, of the State Department; Elsie Ekengren, in tweeds; Paul Daniels, also of the State Department, with his bride, the former Theodora Olivier; Hank Whitney, Victor Sutro, Carolyn Chantry and Dr. Nemecek, of the Czechoslovakian Legation, who was busy introducing the newly arrived Counselor and Mme. Brejzska.

A BIG "YES" was the answer to the questionnaires sent out by Mrs. John R. Williams last spring on whether the Friday evening Supper Clubs should be increased from 10 to 15 dances.

The first dance (all are held at the Sulgrave Club) will take place on Friday evening, November 5, and the others will continue approximately every two weeks until May. There are several new members of Mrs. Williams' committee, including Margot Garrett, who made her debut last year; Mr. and Mrs. Gale McLean, Mr. and Mrs. John Hinckley and Jimmy Mitchell. Others are Col. and Mrs. Edwin Watson (he is military aide to the President; she is Frances Nash, the well-known pianist); Mr. and Mrs. Blaise de Sibour, Mr. and Mrs. C. Matthews Dick, Mr. and Mrs. William Cushman, Mr. and Mrs. Jasper DuBose, and Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn.

The annual Thrift Shop ball, for the benefit of the charitable institution of that name, will be held the first week of December at the Sulgrave Club, under Mrs. Williams' direction.

THE DASHING Natalie Prichett is off today for the West Coast, where she will visit her family at their home near Los Angeles. She expects to go to San Francisco off and on to hear the Metropolitan Opera, which is out there for five weeks before opening in New York for the winter.

En route to Los Angeles Mrs. Prichett will stop in Chicago and will attend a large luncheon to be given there tomorrow by Lawrence Whiting, who will take his guests to the Princeton-Chicago game that afternoon.

During Natalie's absence, the popular "at homes" which she and her aunt, Mrs. Sydney Cloman, hold every Tuesday will be discontinued until her return in November.

Miss Schwartz Wed To Harry Wender

In the presence of members of the immediate families Miss Gertrude Schwartz, daughter of Mrs. Emmanuel Schwartz, of New York, was married yesterday afternoon at 3:30 to Harry Sylvester Wender, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wolf B. Wender. The ceremony took place in the chapel of the Eighth Street Temple, Dr. Abram Simon officiating, and was followed by a reception for several hundred guests in the temple library.

The rooms were decorated with white flowers and refreshments were served from buffet tables. The bride wore an afternoon frock of steel blue crepe with an off-the-face hat in a dubonnet shade and a corsage of purple orchids. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Mildred Schwartz, of New York, who was gowned in dubonnet crepe with a gray hat and accessories. Dr. Leon Gordon was best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Wender will sail from New York tomorrow on a two-week cruise to the West Indies, and upon their return will live here.

Coppolas to Sail.

The Military Attache of the Italian Embassy and Signora Coppola will sail tomorrow from New York for a vacation in Italy. They will return to Washington the first week in December.

Mary Wilson Back in Capital

Miss Mary Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frederic Wilson, who will bow to society December 4, returned Wednesday night from Newport after a two-week visit there with Countess Szechenyi,, wife of the former Hungarian Minister to the United States. Miss Sylvia Szechenyi made her debut at Newport in August.

Miss Wilson's mother, the former Amylita Talbot, was herself a belle here in her debutante days.

Mrs. Edward Earl Brownell, of San Francisco, cousin of Mrs. Wilson, who also arrived in Washington Wednesday night, will be her guest until Monday. Mrs. Brownell, although she has never called Washington "home," has many friends here.

Misses Bradley, Perin and Shouse Back From Europe

Judge and Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner are at the Vanderbilt Hotel in New York, where they went to meeet Mrs. Groner's daughters, the Misses Elizabeth and Marian Shouse. With Miss Anne Perin and Miss Mary Bradley of Washington, the Misses Shouse have been touring Europe this summer, going to England, France and Russia. They landed in New York yesterday on the Europa.

Mrs. Joseph Bradley, who is residing at her country place near Rockville, is also in New York to meet her daughter. They are expected to return to Washington tomorrow.

Dance Reopens The Washington Country Club

Congressmen and Many District Officials Are in Attendance.

The newly rebuilt Washington Golf and Country Club opened its doors last evening, and guests soon gathered around the elaborate buffet table on which the piece de resistance was a large cake modeled in every detail after the new club building. Dancing lasted far into the evening.

Col. Christopher Garnett, president of the club, welcomed the guests, among whom were Representative Howard W. Smith, of Virginia; the Counselor of the State Department and Mrs. Walton R. Moore; Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, assistant administrator of the Works Progress Administration; District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Mrs. Hazen; Corporation Counsel of the District of Columbia and Mrs. Elwood Seal; Judge and Mrs. Proctor and Judge and Mrs. Oscar Luhring, of the District Court, and Judge and Mrs. McCarthy, of the second court of Arlington County.

Also Gen. James H. Drain, President of the District Bar Association and Mrs. Harry I. Quinn; Dr. Thomas E. Neal, president of the District Medical Association; E. F. Colladay, president of the District Board of Trade; Mr. and Mrs. Leslie C. Garnett; Charles H. Doing, jr., former president of the club; Chairman of the Arlington County Board and Mrs. McShea, and Mrs. Elizabeth Magruder.

Visiting presidents from other clubs included N. G. Gormley, of Columbia Country Club; Donal Chamberlain, of Kenwood Country Club; Robert P. Smith, of Congressional, and Spencer Gordon, of the University Club.

Earlier in the afternoon a golf contest between eight professionals and eight amateurs of the District of Columbia took place.

Others in charge of arrangements in addition to Col. Garnett were Dr. Robert Scott Lamb, chairman of reception committee, and Mrs. Thomas N. De Lashmutt and Ralph Fowler.

Minister of Sweden Goes to Worcester To Open Art Show

The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom are in Worcester, Mass., where the Minister will open the Swedish Tercentenary Art Exhibit in the Worcester Museum. The exhibit was first shown in New York and will be taken to several other important American cities.

The Minister and Mme. Bostrom will return to Washington the first of next week.

Woodrings Back From New York

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring returned to Washington last evening after a brief stay in New York, where they stopped at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Former Senator and Mrs. Marcus Coolidge, parents of Mrs. Woodring, who have been visiting their son-in-law and daughter, have returned to their home in Fitchburg, Mass.

Guests to Arrive.

Alexander B. Legares To Visit in Georgetown

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander B. Legare will arrive in Washington October 22 to visit their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Pulver, at their Georgetown home. They will remain here until after Christmas, when they will go to their estate in Summerville, S. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Pulver entertained earlier in the week at a small cocktail party for Mr. and Mrs. Henry Thorne, their guests from Darien, Conn.

THESE ARE THE DRESSES
FOR FALL AND WINTER . . .

which a woman or miss should cherish and wear with pride and ever-increasing satisfaction. They have that desired look of smart simplicity, superb in cut and line. They are made of fine materials in harmonious colours, and we should like to add that they have a dash of wit in each charming detail. Because we have kept a shrewd eye to the right styles for the occasion, you will recognize in them the exact dresses for daytime, sports, afternoon and evening which you most desire for immediate wearing.

Arts Club Fair Opening Attracts Many Patrons

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

La Foire aux Croutes is in full swing at the Arts Club. Undaunted by the chill in the air and the clouds in the sky, patrons were on hand at the hour the doors opened yesterday afternoon and came in increasing numbers until 10 o'clock when it closed for the night. It opens again this afternoon at 2, with a marionette show as a feature for the children and will continue tomorrow and tomorrow night.

"Atmosphere," for which the Arts Club is noted, began with the bright embrellas of the sidewalk cafe in front of the dignified and historic old mansion, which houses the club, and followed the patrons all the way through. Patrons entered by the way of the basement where the first of the artists' wares were on display. There were pictures by members of the club, both residents of Washington and those who have moved from the Capital and sent back contributions. Some were sold on commission and others given outright. There were many early buyers in the afternoon, interested in having their choice of the paintings.

Weather Too Cold For Out-Door Booths

From this room patrons were guided into the garden which was to have been the setting for the flower mart and the candy booths. The flowers were arranged on the outdoor stage, with a picturesque house as the background, but the October winds, coming in guests across the garden wall, discouraged Mrs. Ralph Richards, the chairman, in her plan for doing business outdoors, and the stock was moved to shelter. The balcony overlooking the garden—which is one of the reasons for the Potboilers Fair—accommodated rows of books which were in charge of John Russell Mason.

From the garden the path led into the waffle room, where welcome warmth and the fragrance of crisp, fresh waffles enticed the visitors to linger. This was under the direction of Mrs. Chester Nimitz. Next door (in the dining room) was the Cabaret de la Vache Enragee, over which Mme. Garzia presided, assisted by Mrs. Robert LeFevre and her daughters, Martha and Mildred, Mrs. C. H. Whitsey and Mrs. Charles Benoit. The setting for the cabaret was striking and colorful, and the natural French accents, with which Mme. Garzia, Mrs. Benoit and Mrs. Whitsey spoke, contributed a convincing note. All were, of course, in gay costumes. Haygood Brown, who has studied with Isadore Philipe at the Paris Conservatory, Margaret Tolson and Germaine Johnson provided the music during the evening.

Follies Popular Evening Feature

There were also the Follies—performances at 7:45 and 9 p. m.—for those who sought entertainment. They were directed by Ben Smart, with a cast of 30, and dealt with the visit of a group of art students to Paris. Walter Studdiford was responsible for the music for the production.

On the way into the little theater, patrons were attracted on all sides by wares for sale—everything from dresses to dinner bells and dolls to dish towels. Mrs. Charles Bittinger and William McManus, who were co-chairman of the general arrangements, and Lewis Lofton Moneyway, president of the club, were all helping wherever an extra person was needed.

Presiding at the different counters and tables were Mrs. Charles Stratton, Mrs. William Hepner, Mrs. Samuel Koones, Miss Constance Etz, Mrs. M. A. Childrey, treasurer of the club, who was armed with a box of money; Mrs. Edward O. Hulbert, and Miss Jessie Baker.

Upstairs were the white elephants (one was a tiger rug and not an elephant at all). Mrs. Edwin Etz and Mrs. Robert Youmans were selling these. Then there were glass and antiques with Miss Mary Allen, Mrs. Malcolm Corse, Mrs. Louis Heath, R. D. Engel, a charter member of the club, and Miss Bertha Noyes, in charge.

The fair was a gay occasion from the time the doors opened and promises to be increasingly popular as it continues, and word goes around that it's a good one.

This is the first time in seven years such a fete has been staged by the Arts Club, and need for funds for the balcony and fire escape, recently completed, are responsible for the undertaking. The last one given brought in approximately $2,000, and yesterday's success encouraged club members to hope for as much or more from this.

Miss Motley Presides at Y. W. Meeting

Miss Sara Motley, new president of the Blue Triangle Club of the Y. W. C. A., presided last night at its first business meeting of the season. The business session was preceded as usual by a club supper in the fourth floor dining room and by a recreational period devoted to various activities—a gym class, ping pong, public affairs discussion group, glee club, and a class in better speech for business girls—from which the girls could choose that they enjoyed most.

Plans for the year were outlined at the business meeting. A badminton club, under the direction of Ruth Sertle, was formed to meet on Saturday nights in the gymnasium. The public affairs group is to be a regular feature, under the direction of Miss Bertha Pabst, of the National League of Women Voters. The gym class also will be continued through the season. The social committee is planning a week-end house party at Vacation Lodge, in Cherrydale, on October 30 and 31, and a Thanksgiving dance on November 27.

The club hopes to send several delegates to the national convention in Columbus, Ohio, in the spring. Miss Minerva Whitmore, finance chairman, is in charge of several fund-raising projects for this purpose.

The Blue Triangle has 145 members, representing practically every State in the Union, and publishes a monthly paper, with Miss Frances Bodenheimer as the editor.

Officers, in addition to Miss Motley, are Miss Mabel Hutchins, of Maine, vice president and membership chairman; Miss Margaret Stevens, Portland, Oreg., secretary; Miss Whitmore, State of Washington, treasurer; Miss Della Furzer, Michigan, program chairman; Miss Alberta Mahone, West Virginia, social service chairman; Miss Marjorie Allen, of the District, social chairman; Miss Catherine Richardson, also of the District, music chairman. A second vice president has been added to assist the president. Miss Mary O'Connor was announced last night for this new office.

Alpha Omicron Pi Unit Will Hold Tea Sunday

Washington Alumnae Chapter of Alpha Omicron Pi, National women's fraternity, will open the season with a tea in honor of its new members, from 3 to 5 p. m. Sunday at the home of Mrs. Helen Henderson, 4420 Klingle road northwest. Miss Margaret Cook and Miss Emily Mitchell, two former presidents of the chapter, will pour.

Miss Anita Peters, president, will welcome the new members. She will be assisted by Mrs. Norma Shook, vice president, who recently returned from the National convention at Yellowstone National Park.

The Washington chapter is making plans to continue its philanthropic work this fall in connection with the Frontier Nursing Service in the Kentucky mountains, sponsored by the national organization.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

THE GARDEN DEPARTMENT of the Takoma Park Women's Club has the season all mixed up so far as club meetings are concerned. Just when everyone else is going to opening meetings, it is having its closing session—and the gathering promises to be interesting. Mrs. J. N. Quinn, 307 Elm avenue, will be hostess Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

There will be a round table discussion at which members will review the successes and failures in their gardens during the summer months. After the business meeting luncheon will be served and the "gardeners" will then go to the home of Mrs. C. A. Reed, 109 Chestnut avenue, where an exhibition of flowers in minature containers will be arranged. The members' farewell gifts to each other will be packages of seeds which they will exchange for spring planting.

The garden section holds its meetings during the garden season and will open its sessions for the coming year just about the time the other club departments are preparing to wind up their programs.

Mrs. Walter P. Harman, president of the club, has called an executive board meeting for 1 o'clock today at the home of Mrs. Byron M. Coon, 9108 Crosby road, Woodside.

• • • •

THE SOROPTIMISTS just now are engaged in collecting books for a library at the Home for Incurables. Elva McNamara, chairman of the civics committee, is in charge. The fall conference of the South Atlantic region of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs will be held here tomorrow at the Dodge Hotel. The meeting will convene at 3:30 and dinner will be served at 6:30.

Nell Hysong, a past president, who entertained the club early in the summer at her home, Broadwater-on-the-Bay, will give another party, an oyster roast, on October 24.

• • • •

FRANCES PARKINSON KEYES, editor of the D. A. R. magazine, has left for a speaking tour in New England. She will address the Catholic Woman's Club of Providence, R. I., on "World Kaleidoscope," and from Providence will go to New Hampshire to spend a few days at her home, Pine Grove Farm, North Haverhill, and to address the Unity Club of Lancaster. On her way south she will also speak before the Woman's Club of Fall River, Mass. During her stay in New England she will confer informally with different groups of the D. A. R. on matters pertaining to the magazine. She will return to Washington in time for the national board meting on October 26.

• • • •

The District of Columbia Daughters of 1812 are making plans for a reception to be given in honor of the national president, Mrs. Arthur J. O'Neil, next Friday afternoon at the national headquarters, 1461 Rhode Island avenue. Mrs. O'Neil will be here from Chicago for the meeting of the State regents of the Daughters of the American Revolution in which she is also an officer.

• • • •

There will be a bridal couple from Mooseheart participating in the Mooseheart Day program to be sponsored here October 24 by Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose. Lavina Platt and Albert Erickson, both graduates of Mooseheart, were married October 2. The bride came to Washington to take a Government position in the Navy Yard and a few months later Mr. Erickson came also. They were in the class of 1933 at Mooseheart and are among the young people who found not only home and education in the Moose "city of children" but also romance. The bride was honored with a shower at last week's meeting of Columbia Chapter.

Fombona-Pachano And Wife Will Go To Bolivar Festival

Dr. Diogenes Escalante, Venezuelan Minister to the United States, will be represented by Dr. Jacinto Fombona-Pachano, Counselor of the Venezuelan Legation, and Senora de Fombona-Pachano at the formal dance to be given in the grand ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton in New York, Saturday night, October 30. The affair is being held by the Club Las Tres Americas, to commemorate the birthday of Simon Bolivar, the South American liberator.

Each South American and Central American republic will be represented at the dance by a Consul General and a girl dressed in native costume. The United States and Canada also will be represented among the 500 guests who will attend.

The Club Las Tres Americas was established in order to promote cordial relations and true understanding among the peoples of North America, South America and Central America. John A. Bravo Palma is the president of the organization and Buenaventura Sanchez is its secretary of foreign affairs.

Miss Kincaid to Wed Carl Welch Taylor

Dr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Kincaid, of 5704 Thirty-third street, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Virginia Carolyn Kincaid, to Carl Welch Taylor, of Huntington, W. Va. Mr. Taylor is the son of Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Taylor, of Huntington.

The wedding will take place in Washington, November 12, at the Southern Presbyterian Church, and will be attended only by members of the immediate family.

C. A. R. Gains 400 Members

Mrs. W. H. Pouch Presides at Meeting of National Board in D. C.

Four hundred new members were reported by Mrs. Ryland C. Bryant, registrar, at the meeting of the national board of the National Society of Children of the American Revolution yesterday morning at Memorial Continental Hall, Mrs. William H. Pouch, of New York City, national president, who is at headquarters for several days, presided.

Mrs. John Frances Weinmann, vice president, asked to be allowed to present each public library in Arkansas with a shrine of the Constitution in the name of the C. A. R. Mrs. Edmund Burke Ball, of Munsey, Ind., presented a shrine to the National Society and is giving one also to each high school in her State. Miss Eleanor Graham Lawrence, State director of Kentucky, has presented a register of the Mulberry Presbyterian Church from 1796 to 1854. Another gift offered the C. A. R. is an antique Colonial four-poster child's bed for the C. A. R. museum, to be presented by Mrs. Larz Anderson.

Mrs. Amos A. Fries submitted a patriotic ritual to be used in the meetings of the society.

Mrs. Pouch will be guest of honor today at a reception at the Washington Club in connection with the formation of a State C. A. R. for the District.

Lieut. John Shaw Society, C. A. R., will celebrate the signing of the Constitution by a pilgrimage to the special exhibit at the Library of Congress tomorrow. This will follow the regular luncheon meeting at the home of Betty Earll, 5045 Reno road, at 1 o'clock.

Robert Mason de Shazo, jr., will entertain the Potomac Society C. A. R., tomorrow afternoon at his home, 2017 Nineteenth street northwest. Mrs. James Henry Harper, State director of the Children of the American Revolution, and Mrs. F. Hunter Creech, regent of Potomac Chapter, D. A. R., will be guests.

25 Women Play Big Part In Roll Call

The story of how 25 women organized and delivered more than 500,000 articles for the current Red Cross Roll Call, is really the story of what goes on behind the scenes each year when the local chapter speals to Washington for support.

Early last August, Mrs. Tyree R. Rivers and Miss Grace Wright, Red Cross volunteers since war days, reported to Roll Call headquarters at 1601 I street northwest to formulate a plan for distribution of supplies to Washington's 10,000 Roll Call solicitors. When the campaign opened six weeks later the scene was set, the supplies ready.

At this point they were joined by Mrs. Ruth Smith, a Red Cross Gray Lady from Walter Reed Hospital, and together they began the issuance of buttons, enrollment cards, posters and many other articles used in Roll Call.

A means for distribution was needed, so the Red Cross Motor Corps was summoned. Headed by Mrs. L. E. Harris, a group of 19 volunteers began the assignment of carrying supplies to every section of the city. Phone calls were beginning to come into headquarters, carrying the request for additional supplies not previously ordered. Up until yesterday, 529,410 articles had been issued to workers throughout the city.

Mrs. Harris' group, furnishing their own automobiles and gas, delivered the greatest amount of Roll Call supplies ever issued in Washington. Members include: Mrs. Howard Krinbill, Mrs. Fanny B. Ingram, Mrs. J. S. Broadbent, Mrs. Karl Schmitt, Mrs. Z. S. Hendricks, Miss Madeline Leckie, Mrs. F. L. Jenkins, Mrs. W. D. Harris, Mrs. John S. Grant, Mrs. J. C. Armstrong, Mrs. John W. Norwood, Mrs. J. C. Haskell, Mrs. A. G. Sandford, Miss Margaret Samson, Mrs. August Eberly, Miss Ruth Hutson, Miss Polly Wirgman, Mrs. Fred Welthamer and Mrs. O. J. Jordon.

According to Mrs. Harris, orders arrived so fast, it became necessary to call upon a squad of emergency volunteers. Those assisting were James W. Kidwell, Raymond Hales, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Rabb, Mrs. Raymond Ruppert, Mrs. H. C. Broas, Miss Isabelle Belle, Mrs. A. F. Hinrichs, Mrs. M. F. Bailey and Mrs. William P. Wright.

Senator Austin Visits White Sulphur Springs

Among those enjoying the busy autumn season at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., is Senator Warren R. Austin, of Vermont, who is at the Greenbrier with friends. Assistant Secretary of War Louis A. Johnson, who has also been holidaying at the resort, returned to Washington on Wednesday.

Others now at White Sulphur are Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davidge, Mrs. Harry S. Black, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. A. Carter and Miss Frances Carter.

P.-T. A. of Central High To Hold Membership Tea

Central High School Parent-Teacher Association will have its annual membership tea this afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock. Mrs. J. B. Edmunds, vice president in charge, will present a short musical program, and chairmen will outline plans for the coming year.

Mrs. Irving Cashell, membership chairman, is working for an increased membership this year, as a large percentage of the association's funds goes toward clothes and carfare for needy students.

The program for Monday night's meeting will be a sound picture, "George Washington's Railroad," featuring 200 years of American history. Assisting Mrs. Edmunds in receiving will be Mrs. Prentiss Sale, president; Mrs. E. P. Bowyer, Mrs. Robert Mason DeShazo, Mrs. Lawrence Hoover and Mrs. Helen Coolidge. At the tables will be Mrs. Harvey Hawn, Mrs. Anderson Tackett, Mrs. Lyndon Bayliess, Miss Louise Moore and Miss Josephine Crawford.

Post Newspaper Boys Hold Meetings Regularly

These meetings are conducted as a part of the Newspaper Boys of America program. They are held to assure Post readers the best service possible, and to make each of the Newspaper Boys, who operate as independent businessmen on their routes, a more successful operator.

Although Post readers do not attend these meetings, they see their results in excellent service, prompt collections and courteous, considerate dealings with boys who operate under this plan.

A proper amount of social life is injected into these meetings to create a closer fraternal spirit among the boys.

XXXX WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1937 25

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

Before Congress comes galloping back to save us, I ought to be helpful by outlining my plan to stop the salaries of all Senators and Representatives and pay them instead on a commission or cost-minus basis. It's my Xmas present to Congress.

• • • •

Now, don't get frightened or flare up, gentlemen . . . Actually, you'll make more money than you've ever made in your lives. The plan is so simple that you've all probably thought of it yourselves, but didn't feel you could put it over. This may mean penthouse apartments and suburban estates for all of you.

• • • •

Now, let's assume that you've been spending, roughly, over six billion dollars ($6,000,000,000) a year . . . Very roughly, it has seemed to most of us . . . And "assume" is putting it mildly . . . Remember 'way back when you could make the headlines with a billion-dollar Congress?

"—but plenty in commissions."

Let's assume you cut that six billion in half . . . You could do it, if you talked to yourself the way you talked to your wife when she wants to broadcast part of your pay check. That would save the Republic three billions—a 3 with 9 ciphers after it.

• • • •

All right . . . Then suppose we pay each of you Senators and Representatives just one-tenth of 1 per cent (.1%) on this saving. Each of you gentlemen would receive $3,000,000 a year, which you'll admit used to be considered a pretty good yearly wage. You could afford to take every visiting constituent out for a $2 chicken dinner.

• • • •

On this basis, you'd get, all together, about half of the $3,000,000,000 you'd saved, and the Republic would save the other half, or about $1,500,000,000. That would come mighty near the mythical balancing of the mythical budget.

• • • •

Maybe you'd be willing to do it for less . . . Maybe you'd all be content with one-hundred'th of one per cent . . . In that case you'd each get $300,000 a year, which would buy your constituents a lot of beers, and the Republic (poor old Republic) would save $2,850,000,000, hallelujah!

• • • •

Probably you could save more than 3 billions . . . Animated by the damnable profit motive (which now gets you only $10,000 a year) you might save 4 billions—which would bring you in $400,000 a year, even at the stingy one-hundredth of 1 per cent (.01%) . . . Why, you'd all wake up economic royalists and be pinching yourselves!

• • • •

And there could be bonuses for Senators and Representatives who never introduce a bill to spend a dime, and more bonuses for members who vote against every appropriation measure . . . I think you might run it up to a cool half million a year per each, or maybe $5,000,000 a year, depending on the cut, if you ever put the Government on a money-making basis. Ah, the unselfishness of public service!

• • • •

You might not be re-elected, after cutting off the flow of gravy to so many eager constituents . . . But you wouldn't give a hoot, would you, after two to six years in office at $3,000,000 or $300,000 a year?

• • • •

This is a young man's sort of a bill, so I suggest that Senators Lodge, Holt and Pepper (who are still in their 30s) take it under their wings and sponsor it . . . I turn the idea over to them without expecting even a thank you.

• • • •

But it's inevitable that some of the hard-headed older Senators will, for once, agree with their younger colleagues; I expect Carter Glass and McAdoo and Clyde Herring and Bert Wheeler and Borah to come out strong for the bill; and with Jack Garner doing a Paderewski with the gavel, they could put it over.

• • • •

There's just one catch, gentlemen, as you know . . . First you must do something to enable yourselves to profit by a law which increases the emoluments of your offices. After all, you wouldn't be Supreme Court justices, you know . . . I think 36 States would ratify such an amendment—for this lofty purpose—within a few months . . . And then, when you begin drawing $3,000,000 a year, we can take most of it away from you in income taxes.

Masked Bandit Beats and Robs Woman in Store

A colored bandit who donned a black silk mask beat and robbed Mrs. Martha B. Sigworth, of 3633 New Hampshire avenue northwest, in her department store at 3653 Georgia avenue late last night.

Mrs. Sigworth told police the robbe entered her store and asked for some shoe laces. When her back was turned, he slipped on the mask, and when she faced him, he covered her with a gun held inside his pocket.

The robber seized her and threw her to the floor, Mrs. Sigworth said. When she began to scream, he told her he would shoot. He then scooped up $5 from the counter and cash register, and fled.

A chain drug store in the 1100 block of Connecticut avenue was held up and robbed by a dignified bandit, while more than 50 customers and clerks were unaware of what was happening.

The man, said to be between 45 and 50 years old, pointed a pistol at Kenneth Boltinghouse, 24, clerk at the cigar counter.

"Take it easy," he said, "and hand over the money."

The robber emerged from the store and disappeared quietly into the crowds. He got about $50.

As he was waiting for a train in the Union Station, Frank Boehm, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., was approached by a stranger who posed as a guide yesterday.

Boehm accompanied the man, he told police, and soon the stranger met a friend.

The three engaged in a penny-matching game. Boehm told police, and he lost $250. The stranger and his friend promised to return part of their winnings, but they failed to appear at an appointed spot.

Congress Citizens Protest on Traffic

A motion authorizing letters to officials protesting traffic violations on Nichols avenue southeast was passed by the Congress Heights Citizens Association last night.

One letter will be sent Capt. Hugh Groves, of the Eleventh Precinct, urging him to see that his patrolmen are increasingly vigilant in apprehending traffic offenders of all sorts; another to the Capital Transit Co., requesting additional attention be paid by bus drivers to regulations, and a third to Police Court judges, urging heavier fines for violators of traffic laws.

Nominations for the annual election of officers were made. Although he has informed the group he cannot serve beyond his present term, no successor was named for E. J. Reed, the president.

Benson Taylor was nominated for first vice president; L. G. Gelbman and E. E. Bennett for second vice president; Miss Hazel C. Young for treasurer; Mrs. Edna Dulin for secretary and Mrs. Alma Allen for financial secretary. Reed and Taylor were nominated as delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations and Ira Marine was nominated for trustee.

Martin Again Heads East Central Group

The East Central Civic Association last night elected the following officers: C. E. Martin to serve his tenth term as president; W. D. Nixon, first vice-president; J. S. Coage, second vice president; E. V. Allen, recording secretary; Mrs. Ruth Green, corresponding secretary; John C. Payne, treasurer, and Mrs. G. E. Brown, chaplain.

Martin, J. C. Payne, Dr. H. A. Fisher, Mrs. E. V. Allen and William D. Nixon were also chosen as delegates to attend the Federation of Civic Associations.

Tears Ran Rivers, So Dog Mart Must Have Been the Best Ever

By Scott Hart.
A Staff Correspondent.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 14.—There were enough tears in Fredericksburg today to bring unanimous agreement of success for the 239-year-old dog mart.

The Chamber of Commerce said the crowd—about 3,000 persons and 400 dogs—was the greatest ever and the ladies who followed 24-year-old Alonzo Whitlock to the sidelines to watch him weep and talk almost incoherently to "Queenie," the 2-year-old 'possum dog he sold for $6, had the sweetest cry in many moons.

Everybody knew that children cried when they sold their pets (generally under family persuasion) and that sort of crying made for a reasonable sort of dog mart success. But none even hoped for the scene Alonzo made.

"Look," cried an official on the auction block, and some thought he was referring to a brief, snappy, exchange of fractious words between Auctioneer Nathaniel Bacon Kinsey and a man in the crowd. "Look," the official cried, "get your cameras; that's just made to order!"

Already, a small group was following Alonzo. He was leading the hound. The dog was nuzzling her soft muzzle against his leg. Then Alonzo stopped, and the hound leaped up, thrusting her head in his arms.

Had to Sell Her.

Someone asked the weeping countryman why he sold the dog. "I had to sell her," he sobbed; Oh, Lord, I'm never going to see her again. She's got the prettiest voice I ever heard in the woods at night. If I hadn't of needed the money so bad I wouldn't of done it. I'm never goin' to see her no more." There was a white flutter of handkerchiefs among the ladies with red eyes.

"I would have given him $6 if I'd known of it," said a man in the crowd.

"I'm never goin' to see her no more," moaned Alonzo, who used to run the dog through the woods around his home at Unionville, in Orange County.

"Don't take it like that," said K. M. Knight, of Arlington, "you'll probably see her again."

Elsewhere, the mart was throbbing with success. Auctioneer Kinsey (Yours to serve, his business card says) got so hot under a silk hat that he took it off, spoke through the loudspeaker microphone and momentarily silenced the proceedings. He was one of the four chief attractions, the others being Walter Johnson, the pitcher; Oscar D. Williams, the auction man who has rung the auction bell for two famous auctioneers before Kinsey, and the sobbing Alonzo.

Tooting Contest Hot.

The children didn't do much sobbing, but the foxhunters, in contest assembled, manipulated some classic tooting. From all the surrounding countryside they came to compete. They blew until the veins on their necks bulged like muscles. They tooted until their faces seemed ready to burst. They blew funny little echoes that set the dogs barking, and some wound up in such agonies of tooting that they seemed quite limp. And a 19-year-old boy, Hugh Hurlock, of Flat Run, was the best tooter of all, the judges said, giving him a prize and making him toot all over again for the crowd.

This dog mart is an ancient thing, grounded in the country's tradition. 'Way back in 1698, the Indians would come in with their wild dogs and trade for the settlers' dogs. In 1927, the Chamber of Commerce seized on the idea and Fredericksburg has known a day of general weeping, once a year, ever since.

Today began rather badly for the enterprise. Scarcely had Mack Cowan, a civic leader, mounted the auction block to steer the proceedings under way than he was told the ground was too wet and the mart would be held in the Armory. He went to the Armory and was told that the weather was improving and that the mart would be held in the park, as planned.

As usual, the teachers in schools were wondering why the children were late coming back from lunch. And the bedlam in the park was reaching the proportions of the noise on a dance floor when Cab Calloway unthrottles the cornets and screams "Minnie!" Children were screaming, dogs were barking in a thousand different keys, counter men were barking soft drinks and sandwiches, and the newsreel people were frantic in getting a parade started.

In Cutaway Coat.

The auctioneering began. First off, Oscar Williams rang his bell. Oscar wore a cutaway coat, a beaver hat, and reminded the crowd that his father had rung the bell for Auctioneers James Roach and Gabriel Johnson and that his grandfather had rung the bell on the Washington's Ferry Farm. Auctioneer Kinsey grabbed a dog and sat the dog on his arm as if the arm were a chair. "How much," he yelled, "am I offered?"

Finally, when the bidding on one dog was over, it was found that Larry Elliott, of WJSV, who had bid $7, was the dog's new owner.

Auctioneer Kinsey gloated over a master salesmanship job, saying that he had sold a $2 dog for $7 to a wise, city boy from Washington.

Nearing 3 o'clock, Elliott got even by telling the auctioneer he had but 5 seconds more on the air.

And Darkness Falls.

"Hurry up," he said, "we have just five seconds to get through; the radio is carrying this to all parts of the world. This dog is a wonderful hunter." He talked and talked for about five minutes but the radio listeners didn't hear the sale close on a price of $275.

The sale was raging as darkness came. On the sidelines people were counting their honors:

The Boston bull terrier of George P. Heubi, of Richmond, wore ribbons as the trickiest. The terrier had opened a cardboard box with its teeth and played ball with Heubi; Big Foot, a .nongrel owned by J. W. Patton, of Berea, had been adjudged the ugliest. Patton bought Big Foot and another dog two years ago at the Mart; the other dog died under a car's wheels. Second ugliest dog laurels went to a canine owned by Billy Whitlock. "I don't know what kind of dog Fritz is," said the boy. The champion pet was Dizzy Dame, a Chihauhaus, owned by Mrs. John Stone, of Fredericksburg. Joseph Rotella, of Ellison, went home with first honors on Hunstone Rose, a 5-year-old female English setter.

At the very last, N. H. Shackelford, of the 600 block I street northwest, Washington, was holding one Boston terrier by the leash and carrying two others, small ones, in his overcoat and wondering what the sale would hold for him if his brood was called to the block.

Funds Lacking, Relief Denied 919 in Month

Employable Needy Are Refused Aid Due to Congress Omission.

The Public Assistance Division of the Welfare Department last month denied relief to 919 persons because Congress last session failed to appropriate funds for employables, regardless of their needs. Welfare officials have estimated that there are 3,000 such persons in the District.

Some 300 others were refused aid for other reasons, such as that they had sufficient income, failed to return, or were nonresidents.

The monthly report did not reflect the effects of the new policy ordered by the welfare board recently, viz: to make relief adequate for destitute families with children even though unemployable adults go hungry.

Cases added to the relief rolls in September, the report showed, remained almost constant at 7,800. New cases added were brought on chiefly by illness.

The District Commissioners have indicated they have rejected the plea of the welfare board for $1,225,000 for relief of employables. Welfare officials, however, are planning to carry the fight to Congress again.

The total payments for relief and other forms of public assistance in September amounted to $194,107.79, the average amount allowed for each case being $27.20.

The average expenditures were slightly higher than in August, due to increased seasonal needs.

General relief was allowed 6,768 persons; aid for dependent children went to 4,120; home-care aid was allowed 1,275; old-age pensions were given 2,735, and needy blind pensions were paid to 163.

Postal Aide Favors More Civil Service

William W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General, told the National League of District Postmasters last night that he approved of the civil service and wanted more civil service employes in postmasters' jobs.

Speaking at a banquet at the Willard, Howes declared that postal employes wouldn't enjoy such good working conditions but for the influence of organizations. The Postoffice Department, he said, tells no one what organization to join.

He assured the approximately 500 persons attending the convention banquet that politics had nothing to do with their jobs. "We want you all to be captains of your souls," he said.

Howes stressed the influence that postal workers have upon the Nation, saying that some 42,000,00 people never contact any Government official other than postal employes.

The Assistant Postmaster General also entered a plea in favor of 3-cent postage. To go back to the 2-cent rate, he said, would mean an annual loss to the Government of between $90,000,000 and $100,000,000.

The Postmasters' League, which has been meeting at the Willard, concludes its sessions today. New officers will be elected at 2 p. m.

25 Radios Placed On Motorcycles Of Capital Police

Nearly half of the 50 motorcycle radios to be used by Metropolitan police have already been installed, Inspector L. I. H. Edwards announced yesterday.

Sets are located on the rear fender of the motorcycle, the antennae taking the place of a luggage carrier, while the actual receiving appartus is housed on either side of the rear wheel. Protective guards keep the apparatus from being injured if the machine falls over while parked. The loud speaker, designed like a spot light, is set on the handle bars. A volume control is near the speedometer.

Inspector Edwards said that the radios are being installed at the rate of about three or four a day. Each set costs about $150, or three times as much as police car radios. A commercial firm, maker of motorcycles, experimented with the sets for more than three months before installation began about two weeks ago.

Driver Runs Down Girl, Flees Twice

Elizabeth Davis, 16, of 330 Duke street, Alexandria, was the victim of a hit and run driver yesterday who allegedly returned some minutes later, learned she was slightly injured, and then drove off for the second time.

She was walking in front of a friend's house at 2829 Duke street, she told police, when she was struck by a car with North Carolina plates. The driver continued for a quarter of a mile, then returned to ask if she were hurt, it was said.

"Yes, I am. Will you help me into the house?" police quoted her as saying.

The driver grunted, got back into his car and drove off, she said. Refusing hospital treatment, Miss Davis gave police the license number of the car.

Clinic to Treat Children's Feet Launched Here

Mrs. Freda Ostrow Presides at Discussion of Health Project.

First official steps in a campaign to establish clinics throughout Washington to examine and correct the feet of public and high school children in the District were taken last night, when the Child Foot Health League of the District of Columbia met in Thomson School.

A group of well-known orthopedic physicians attended the informal gathering. Presiding was the founder of the group, Mrs. Freda R. Ostrow, well-known psyio-therapist and specialist in foot disorders. She was assisted by the cofounders of the league, Mrs. B. G. McIlwee and E. H. Pullman, past president of the Roosevelt P.-T. A. and the Manor Park Citizens' Association.

Because several officials who had been invited to come were unable to attend, no definite organization was undertaken. Another meeting will be held within the next month or so, Mrs. Ostrow said.

The league was conceived of about two years ago by Mrs. Ostrow, who had observed how preventive treatment could offset many defects in the feet of children. She interested Mrs. McIlwee and Pullman, and since that time the trio have been planning to make establishment of the clinics possible.

Beginning with kindergarteners, children of all ages would be examined and treated for various foot deficiencies. It has been estimated that almost 80 per cent of children of high school age have foot defects, many of which could have been cured easily in early grade school days.

Two Lawyers In D. C. Face Disbarment

Bar Committee Accuses Pair in Inquiry Into Unethical Practice.

Other Cases Are Studied; May Be Suspended From Police Court.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

At least two Washington attorneys, accused of unethical practices, face suspension from Police Court and possible disbarment, it was learned last night.

Although only two specific names and reported instances of irregularities have been cited, Judge Edward M. Curran, acting chief justice of Police Court, indicated "three or four" additional cases are under investigation.

Names of the two lawyers were submitted to Judge Curran by a special committee of the District Bar Association appointed earlier this year to study alleged "shyster" activities in the lower court.

Charged With "Capping."

The accused attorneys, it was learned, are charged in the committee's report with misrepresenting cases to the four Police Court judges; practicing a system of securing clients known as "capping," and accepting money from potential clients on the pretext of "fixing" cases.

On one occasion, it was further learned, an attorney represented himself to police as a Washington newspaperman in order to approach a prospective client, and discuss his case. This practice, according to reports, is common among a certain class of lawyers who frequent Police Court.

Under the so-called "capping" system, attorneys who constantly patrol corridors of the Court Building spot an apparent stranger in trouble, engage him in conversation, and offer "services" for a nominal fee, it was explained.

Numerous Police Court attorneys reports indicate, employ "runners" to contact prospective clients, and recommend certain lawyers who will "get them out of trouble."

The Bar Association's investigation, it was revealed, has uncovered cases where attorneys have accepted money from clients after they know nothing can be done to aid them.

Immediate action against this type of Washington barrister will be taken by the Police Court judges, it was promised last night. Sitting as a board, however, the judges are awaiting further reports from the bar committee before authorizing formal charges.

Apparently determined to "get to the bottom" of unethical activities around Police Court, the judges are prepared to hear all charges in open session, it was reported.

May Act as Tribunal.

"And if there is any foundation for these acusations," said a spokesman for the court, "steps will be taken to bar those involved from practice."

Under Police Court rules, the four judges may sit as a tribunal to hear charges and act accordingly.

When the Bar Association committee files formal charges against the suspected lawyers, a second committee of three attorneys will be appointed to complete a final investigation and present evidence to the judges. One member of this committee will act as prosecutor.

Raskin Rates Sarron Over Armstrong.

By Shirley Povich.

I have it straight from Harry Raskin, who insists he knows the fight business and will take his oath on a stack of libels, that Petey Sarron will beat dusky Henry Armstrong when those two featherweights go to bat on the evening of October 29 at Madison Square Garden.

POVICH.

Raskin, a reformed middleweight who is now attached to Sarron's entourage as trainer for the Syrian lad, bounced back from New York the other day bubbling with optimism. He hauled right off and said that Sarron would beat Armstrong and before he could be unquoted he had a slew of reasons why.

* * * *

"Them's false odds, that 2 to 1 and 8 to 5 they're laying against Petey in New York," Lighthead Harry insisted. "I'm grabbing plenty of that for myself, personally. If they go into the ring at anything more than even money, I'll be surprised. The way Petey has been knocking 'em stiff at the Pioneer A. C. gym is opening the eyes of a lot of those fight experts.

* * * *

"There's a lotta angles to this thing. That Armstrong ain't gonna be helped by the weight, for one thing. He's got to make 126, like Petey, and he can't do that without cutting off a leg. Anyway, you know what I mean. Armstrong had a heluva time making 130 for Orville Drouillard not so long ago in Detroit and when he takes off four more pounds he'll be so weak you can knock him over with a feather.

* * * *

"Sarron weighs 128 right now, and he's only been in training a week. He can take off those two pounds overnight. I never saw Petey in such shape. He'll be strong at 126—a lot stronger than Armestrong. Those fights over in Africa helped Petey. He's hard as iron and those guys who think he's a powder-puff puncher are crazy. Sarron never was a knocker-out, but he can cut a guy up somethin' awful.

* * * *

"Sure, Armstrong is good, but he never did fight anybody like Petey. There's only one Sarron. Armstron never saw a style like Petey's—that windmill stuff that hits you in a half dozen places almost at once. If Armstrong thinks he's gonna walk into Petey and lay them fists on him like he's been laying 'em on those other punks, he's in for an awful surprise.

* * * *

"In the first place, they ain't nobody yet who even knocked Petey out. Sarron's too smart and he can take it. Armstrong is a busy fighter, but Petey's a cutie. If Armstrong tried to overpower Petey like he's been overpowering those other featherweights, somebody's going to get hurt—bad—and it won't be Sarron!

* * * *

"It'll be right down Sarron's alley, too, if Armstrong tries to get tough in there. You know how Armstrong fights, with his head down on his chest and always coming in. Well, he's bound to butt the other fellow with that head of his and cut 'em up. He won't get away with that against Petey. Sarron is a clean fellow, ordinarily—a little gentleman—but he knows more dirty tricks in the ring than any fighter I ever did see.

* * * *

"If Armstrong keeps it clean, Sarron will make a clean fight out of it, but if Armstrong tries any of his tricks, Petey's apt to massacre him in there. No guy can stand up to Armstrong and beat him, but Petey ain't a stand-up fighter. He's on the move and I'd like to have a nickel for every punch that Armstrong misses. Sarron'll lick any featherweight who'll come to him, and that's the only way Armstrong knows to fight."

* * * *

He revealed later, though, that Sarron is getting a $15,000 guarantee

Cards Fear Air Attack By Invader

By Lewis F. Atchison.

"Dutch" Bergman's burly boys from Brookland, the Flying Cardinals of Catholic University, go gunning for their third and most important victory of the season tonight at Griffith Stadium, where they meet Detroit University at 8:30 o'clock.

It will be the "rubber" game of three between the schools and the District eleven is a slight favorite to topple its opponent from the ranks of the unbeaten. At least 10,000 fans are expected to see the game.

But it is a difficult task the Cards are undertaking as Bergman well realizes. The Titans are noted for their varied and well-balanced offense, and are strictly a pass and run outfit. Defense, while not neglected entirely, is of secondary importance to cagey Gus Dorais, who subscribes to the theory that a good attack will whip a good defense any time.

Remember Mr. Knott?

Detroit plastered a fancy 26-0 defeat on the Cardinals in their initial meeting at Griffith Stadium several years ago with Doug Knott throwing passes from one end of the lot to the other. Catholic's team that year was supposed to be one of its best, but it crumpled like a paper house in a windstorm before the visitors' powerful thrusts.

And it was only by the grace of a last-minute forward-lateral combination pass play that the Cards eked out a 13-7 decision in the second game. Detroit came from behind that gray afternoon in its own stadium to overtake Catholic, which had helped itself to a 7-0 lead.

If the first two games are a criterion, tonight's battle will be one of wide open football with both clubs resorting to every piece of strategy at their command. Eddie LaFond, Bergman's assistant, who scouted the Titans, reports that they have another powerful combination—one that can whip Catholic with a fair share of the breaks. It is a team that can't be underrated.

Well-Rounded Team.

It is a well-rounded eleven that Bergman will send onto the gridiron tonight. The line was adequately tested in the Canisius and La Salle games and left little to be desired. The backfield displayed an abundance of power even though the co-ordination left something to be desired. Tonight the two departments hope to be at their best, and they'll have to be to win.

Calabrese and Kasunich will be at ends, and the tackles will be held down by those worthies, Katalinas and Cairo. Capt. Vic Sochon and Sabo, guards, and White, center, complete the starting line. "Irish Carroll, Burke Vidnovic, Bud Munhall and Rocco Pirro will carry the ball and attend to other sundry backfield duties, and Detroit should find them a hard quartet to stop.

Detroit is expected to show their host a colorful aerial attack to supplement its usual hard-running attack. Dorais doesn't spare the strategy at any time and will show Catholic everything in his book of tricks if the need arises.

Gophers, 'Little Brown Jug' And All, Ready for Michigan

Minneapolis, Oct. 14.—The "Little Brown Jug" is up for grabs again Saturday at Ann Arbor.

Minnesota's Galloping Gophers, 36 strong, and with a guard around the "Jug," left tonight for the battle with Michigan in a different frame of mind from the past three years when the Gopher juggernauts smashed over an even 100 points to nothing for the Wolverines.

Coach Harry Kipke's remark that he "wouldn't be surprised if Michigan wins" and captured the "Jug" brought the first smile to Coach Bernie Bierman's face in two weeks. He pointedly forgot to argue the question with the Michigan mentor.

Minnesota defeated by Nebraska and held to a 6-to-0 count by Indiana, was given little better than an even chance Saturday, in contrast to the previous three years, when they were overwhelming favorites.

The "Little Brown Jug" tradition originated in the famous 3-to-3 tie in 1903, when Oscar Munson, Gopher custodian, took a 5-gallon water jug from the Michigan quarters, painted on the score and announced, "When you beat Minnesota you can have it."

Andy Uram, Minnesota's "ace" will be at his left half post and Minnesota fans hope he repeats his performance at Ann Arbor two years ago when he reeled off a 58-yard touchdown run and three minutes later repeated with a 73-yard touchdown gallop.

Although in 27 games, Michigan won 18, Minnesota 7 and 2 have been tied, the closeness of the scores in the majority of the contests was indicated with Michigan scoring 296 points to Minnesota's 232.

Mrs. Morrow, Titleholder, Meets Defeat

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Marion Brown's late season rush for a top position in local golf circles will meet the challenge of Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley this morning at Indian Spring for the Middle Atlantic women's championship.

The latter, a former champion, disposed of the defending titleholder, Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, 6 and 5, yesterday, while the Manor co-ed defeated Mrs. Charlotte Stern, 2 and 1, after a nip-and-tuck battle in which both slipped from the near-par peak they had maintained in previous matches.

It will be the third meeting of the year for the final-round opponents, with the score standing 1 up in the previous battles. Mrs. Meckley won at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., 1 up, in a second-round match, while Miss Brown, aided by 3 handicap strokes, avenged the defeat in The Washington Post Cup play with a 6 and 5 triumph.

Close Matches.

The blonde Manor player, also a member of the host club, won the medal with an 82, and has since won three matches by close margins over Mrs. Myron Davy, Mrs. K. S. Giles, on the twentieth hole, and Mrs. Stern. Mrs. Meckley, playing on her home course that she has scored in as low as 75, holds three decisive margins over Mrs. Simons, Mrs. Hussey, and Mrs. Morrow, leaving today's title round a toss-up.

Mrs. Stern, who met and defeated two of the young stars, Helen Dettweiler and Ellen Kincaid, in previous matches, neared a clean sweep as she stood 2 up at the end of seven holes.

A streak of three-putt greens cost her the eighth and ninth holes, but she again assumed the lead on the twelfth with a 5. Marion won the thirteenth to again deadlock the issue, and after halving the short fourteenth gained the winning margin with 5s on the fifteenth and sixteenth, resulting from one-putt greens.

Meckley Starts Early.

Mrs. Meckley, who has not been extended in any match, started building her 6-up lead on the fourth hole after they split the starting numbers. The host player, winner of every title in this section, won the next four holes in a row before she dropped the ninth to a par 3 and was cut to 4 at the turn.

Jim Meade, Triple-Threat, May See Action Saturday; Cavaliers Plan Big Reception.

Anticipating one of the toughest games of a hard schedule, the University of Maryland's football squad shoves off tonight for Charlottesville, Va., and tomorrow's fray with Frank Murray's vastly improved Cavaliers.

The squad will not go directly to the scene of battle, but is scheduled to spend tonight in Culpeper to avoid any pre-game celebrations which probably will be in vogue in Charlottesville. The boys will move over to the stadium early tomorrow morning.

Jim Meade, the Terps' brilliant triple-threat star, returned to school yesterday and was in uniform for the first time since last Saturday's game with Western Maryland. Coach Frank Dobson is uncertain whether the boy will play, inasmuch as he is not fully recovered from the shock of his mother's sudden death. Meade will make the trip, and will see action if he so desires.

Preparations have been made to extend a gala welcome to the College Parkers, although the Cavaliers plan to do all of the celebrating themselves. Under Coach Frank Murray, who is putting Virginia football on higher, more profitable basis, the team has been sharpening its offensive weapons all week and expects to show its guest some high class deception.

Bus Males, veteran quarterback, will direct the attack and have a big hand in carrying out Murray's battle plans personally. If there is

White Sox Given $549 From Series

Chicago, Oct. 14 (AP).—It took them longer than usual to prove it, but the White Sox of the American League are still Chicago's city baseball champions, and $549.54 apiece wealthier.

The Sox, who devoted a total of eight games to conquering the National Leaguers in 1933 and 1936, had to go back to 1931 for precedent this time, but cleaned up the problem yesterday by winning the seventh game, 6 to 1, behind the sparkling hurling of John Whitehead. Thus, the White Sox made it four city series in a row, as well as their 15th triumph, against six Cub victories and one tie.

Bill McKechnie Signs With Reds; Will Get $25,000

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Oct. 14.—Bill McKechnie signed today a two-year contract as manager of the last-place Cincinnati Reds, and with a guarantee of $25,000 annually, plus a bonus, became, officials said, the third highest paid skipper in the major leagues.

"But I am no miracle man," warned the genial Pennsylvanian, asserting he had turned down two "better offers" in order to affiliate with Warren Giles, Reds' general manager and his friend for 15 years.

Giles said he felt the contract figure should be made public "because of certain statements by people who think they know it all."

He did not explain further, but declared a $5,000 bonus would be paid annually to the new manager, should the Reds' 1938 home attendance maintain the club average of 450,000 or the club finish in the first division.

Giles said he knew of only two other team pilots receiving a larger salary—Bill Terry, of the Giants, at $40,000 a year, and Joe McCarthy, of the Yanks, who yesterday signed a three-year contract at $35,000.

"It will take a cyclone to keep Bill from getting $30,000 a year," said Giles.

"And," responded McKechnie, "it may take more than a cyclone to make the Reds pennant winners. Don't expect it. I won't predict it. I'll merely say that we'll finish higher than the Reds did this year."

Georgetown Prep Plays Charlotte

An eager but injury-plagued Georgetown Prep School football team opens its 1937 season against Charlotte Hall Academy today when it clashes with the Cadets at 3:30 on the Garrett Park Field.

Coach Hargaden has drilled a spirited eleven through three weeks of hard scrimmaging and the little Hoyas, though they have three regulars on the bench, are expected to start the season with a victory. Jack Dettweiler, star halfback, is out for the season with a dislocated shoulder, and Earnest Lee, tackle, and Ray Cahill, center, will also be on the sidelines.

As it is also the first game for the Charlotte Hall team, little is known of the strength of the Maryland soldiers, but past records of well-drilled, hard-driving teams from the academy forewarn of a tough battle.

Guldahl and Burke Leading Crack Pros in $5,000 Meet

By the Associated Press.

BURKE.

The Guldahl-Burke combination swept into the lead at the expense of Big Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, and Jimmy Hines, from New York's Garden City club.

Guldahl, who hails from Chicago, and Burke, from White Sulhpur Springs, Va., shot a low ball of 66, 5 under par, to defeat the Dudley-Hines, duo, 3 up.

Harry Cooper and Horton Smith chalked up two points on the plus side of their score sheet with a 2-up victory over Ky Laffoon and Dick Metz in an all-Chicago match.

Lawson Little, of Chicago, one-time king of the amateurs on both sides of the Atlantic, and little Paul Runyan, Metropolis Country Club, New York, won their first-round match from Johnny Revolta, Evanston Country Club, Chicago, and Ray Mangrum, of Dayton, Ohio, 1-up.

Oklahoma City's hopefuls—Zell Eaton, of Twin Hills, and Francis Scheider, of the home club—went down fighting, losing, 1-up, to Jimmy Thomson, Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, and Tommy Armour, of Chicago.

Grid Slump Seen in Midwest.

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

New York, Oct. 14.—Is there a football slump in the Midwest?

I was sitting with a group of Eastern sports writers, talking about this and that, at the Yankee Victory Dinner in 1936 after they had beaten the Giants in the Series, when the conversation veered from baseball to the gridiron.

And there was one amongst us who immediately took command. He is a good friend of mine, and to save embarrassment, I will not mention his name. I will merely give his initials. They are Harry Grayson, Sports Editor of N. E. A. I will further camouflage his identity by saying taht he is the uncle of Bobby Grayson, erstwhile Stanford star.

• • • •

When conversation unfortunately turned to fooball, this sports writer made everyone at the table feel like an amateur. He spoke with authority. He had been around. He had seen things. He said, "Why, you guys back here don't see any football. They simply don't play it in the East. Princeton—Poof! There's only one place in the country where they really play the game. That's in the Midwest—in the Big Ten. Why—any one of those teams could come back here and knock off your best team with their second string!"

• • • •

We listened open-mouthed to this authority, whose identity I must keep secret at all costs. We felt taht we were playing indeed in the Minor Moleskin Leagues. We yearned for the great Midwest, where, Harry said, "Men are men and kids are born with footballs in their dukes."

• • • •

I was still yearning for the great Midwestern game this week as I pored over the football scores, when suddenly I was struck with the intimation that all was not well in the Midwest. Call it heresy if you may, but the results of intersectional play, thus far, showed that Midwestern teams had deigned to play outsiders in nine major engagements, and—had lost six!

• • • •

I was distraught. I checked and rechecked. I thought of wiring Grayson for confirmation, but desisted when I recalled that he disliked collect messages. There were the facts staring me in the face. Boston College, 21; Kansas State, 7; Vanderbilt, 8; Chicago, 9; Washington, 14; Iowa, 0; Manhattan, 3; Michigan State, 0; Colorado, 14; Missouri, 6; Southern California, 13; Ohio State, 12.

• • • •

It seemed impossible. Why—Ohio State had beaten Purdue, one of the Big Ten stalwarts. And Michigan State had beaten Michigan, another Bigf Ten standby. Manhattan, conqueror of Michigan State, was not considered so hot in the East or nationally after being knocked off, 14-7, by Texas A. and M. and barely beating little St. Bonaventure, 21-12. And Southern California, victor over the Midwestern "Scarlet Scourge," was considered just another team on the Pacific Coast, after losing, 7to0, to Washington, which was beaten last week by Oregon State.

• • • •

Actually, the Midwest boasted only four perfect-record, major teams—Detroit, Nebraska, Northwestern and Wisconsin. Whereas our scorned East had 11—Army, Yale, Pittsburgh, Fordham, Navy, Harvard, Holy Cross, aCtholic U., Syracuse, Dartmouth and Cornell.

• • • •

I'll admit that those perfect records mean little at this stage of the season if the colleges sporting unblemished escutcheons haven't tangled with stiff opposition. But listen—Fordham will play Purdue at the Polo Grounds November 7 and Pittsburgh will play Wisconsin, oNire Dame and Nebraska.

• • • •

I know nothing of the abilities of either Pitt or Fordham. Neither has been tested thoroughly yet this season. Of course, they will be Saturday when they collide. But this is only Thursday. And I'm talking about what has happened in the last couple of weeks—things that made me believe there's been a let-down in the Midwst.

Prep Team Is Favored To Triumph

By Jack Munhall.

The piece de resistance of the local scholastic football season will be offered at 3:30 this afternoon in Tech Stadium, where the veteran Maroon and Gray eleven will dig in to meet Gonzaga Prep.

While the season is yet too young to designate the winner as scholastic champion, there is, nevertheless, a widespread belief that the team emerging on top from this battle will ultimately gain the city crown.

Tech, defending champion in the interhigh school series, is a top-heavy favorite to repeat because of the all-around strength it exhibited in defeating Western. The McKinley School showed critics a heavy, fast-charging line and a well-balanced offense led by Quarterback Jack Belote and Fullback Henry Rassier.

Gonzaga, although it has not yet begun defense of its Catholic Prep title, impressed observers in two games to date.

On record, Gonzaga would seem to have an edge. Orrel Mitchell's club is undefeated and has not yielded a touchdown in four contests. In the opener Central was beaten, 6 to 0, and later Loyola, of Baltimore, was beaten, 12 to 3.

Tech Gets Better.

Tech, after bowing successively to Maury High, 6 to 0, and Episcopal, 18 to 0, has slowly reached the form everybody predicted of its experienced squad, and in the Western clash looked every inch a good team.

Each eleven boasts a bevy of fleet, hard-running backs and a formidable line. Tech's Belote, Rassier and Dick Streets comprise an excellent trio of versatile backs who can run, pass and block. Belote has proved time and again that he has no equal in the high school ranks when it comes to kicking.

Gonzaga is even better equipped in backfield strength. Jim Shaw, Jim Ellis, Jack Shea and Louis Difilipo give the Purple the speediest backfield in the city. Shaw and Ellis are the most dangerous offensive threats on the ground and in the air but Shea and Difilipo can also carry the ball and pass.

Washington Golf Club Is Dedicated

High-ranking officials of the District of Columbia and Virginia, including Lieut. Gov. James H. Price of the Old Dominion and District of Columbia Commissioner Hazen, joined local professionals and amateurs in officially dedicating the new clubhouse of the Washington Golf and Country Club yesterday in Ballston.

Leo Walper and Ralph Fowler paired to win the invitation pro-amateur best ball affair with a 66 over the rolling Washington course, a stroke ahead of Al Treder and Harry Pitt, the Manor duo. Walper and Fowler scored nines of 32 and 34, including a 69, on the part of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion.

The clubhouse, destroyed by fire over a year ago, was rebuilt into one of the finest in the section. The gathering, attended by over 600 persons, was an informal opening of the new section of the building.

Leo Walper (unattached) and Ralph Fowler (Washington), 32-34, 66; Al Treder and Harry Pitt (Manor), 34-33, 67; Roland MacKenzie (Congressional) and R. T. Harrell (Washington), 35-33, 68; Fred McLeod (Columbia) and Roger Peacock (Congressional), 34-37, 71; Cliff Spencer (unattached) and Martin McCarthy (Columbia), 37-34, 71; George Diffenbaugh (Indian Spring) and J. Corcoran (Washington), 37-35, 72; Mel Shorey (East Potomac) and Volney Burnett (Indian Spring), 37-37, 74; Bob Barnett (Chevy Chase) and Joe Baldwin (Washington), no card.

anything Males can't do with a ball it hasn't been discovered. A trio of sophomores will work with him, Jim Gillette, Ted Sharretts and Harry McLaugherty. Harry Dinwiddie, the squad's ace passer and one of Dixie's best, will be inserted in the fray for strategical spot plays.

Virginia's line, while not the best, figures to be good enough to keep the Terps on their toes throughout the afternoon. In Co-captains Billy Weeks and Billy Hoback the Cavaliers boast two of the finest tackles in the State. They were outstanding against Navy last week. Others scheduled to start in the trenches are Ray Schmidt and Johnny Acree, guards; Woody George and Jimmy Sargeant, ends, and Al Berkely, center.

Fight Card Set.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 14.—Charley Viney has been matched to oppose Clarence Shrout, local lightheavyweight battler, next Monday night in one of three 3-round battles on the amateur boxing show card to be sponsored by the Cumberland Boys' Club.

There are lots of ways a WOMAN can KISS

LIFE is sweeter when your breath is clean as a breeze. It pays to smoke cigars that are easier on your breath.

New scientific discoveries show that White Owl's Vintage tobacco is low in the substances that cause unpleasant breath. Tests with a delicate osmoscope prove that this tobacco leaves less odor.

White Owl is a better cigar because it always has a Vintage-tobacco filler. Nature—not artificial factory processing—made this tobacco very mild, mellow.

We maintain a vast crop-inspection system—the only known organization of its kind—to locate Vintage tobacco. Even in Vintage years, we classify all filler tobacco into seven grades—and buy only tobacco of the quality of the top three.

The Metallic Nose Knows

Scientists use a sensitive osmoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity and lasting power. Ten different brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was at least 25% easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

Alice G. Captures Laurel Feature in Three-Way Photograph Finish

Tranquility Entry Wins After Battle

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Oct. 14.—Jockey Basil JJames' quick thinking and a game filly named Alice G. teamed to give the favorite players a chance to cheer in the fifth race, the Aragon Purse, featuring today's program. The finish was a three-way photo affair with the Tranquility Farm miss taking the decision after a thrilling battle to the wire. Masked General was second, so the judges reported, with Timber Lady awarded third money.

In addition to winning, Alice G. saved a lot of argument for Timber Lady might have been disqualified had she won. The two hooked up in a dog-cat-dog battle soon after the start and at the turn, Timber Lady lugged over on her rival. James was forced to draw in on the reins, but he did so quickly and soon had the daughter of Macaw in full stride again. She went to her task with a will and disposed of Timber Lady at the wire. On the outside, Masked General had developed momentum and he split the two rivals.

Alice G., with Best News as a running mate, brought the backers of the Tranquility Farm entry a $6.40 mutuel and she stepped the 6 furlongs in 1:14 2-5.

The track was slow from recent rain, but aside from a chill in the air the conditions overhead were ideal for a crowd of 7,500.

Sun Scout Wins.

The daily double of $13.40 was one of the smallest pay-offs of the Maryland season. It involved Absconder, $6 winner of the first race, and Jacola, a $5.20 choice, in the third race. Absconder, making his second start of the year, won by a half length over Happy Hostess and Max B., a photo decision marking the place money.

Jacola, owned by Mrs. E. Friendly, qualified nicely for the Selima Stakes, by winning easily. Sketchbook and Counsuello followed the daughter of Jacopo to the finish line.

Mrs. John Bosley, jr., owner of the ill-fated Chase Me, cheered her Sun Scout to victory in the day's steeplechase. The son of The Scout was capably ridden by Jockey B. Ansteatt, who held his mount under restraint until he moved on to take the lead and defeat Spinach by two lengths. The Scaup, the only other finisher, was 30 lengths behind. Jockey B. Lawson was injured about the head in a fall off Drill Master at the final fence. The winner paid $10.10.

Crepe, a son of Omar Khayyam, led virtually from the start in the fourth race, defeating Agotaras by a length and a quarter with Suntime another three-fourths of a length behind. Crepe, half of the Faulconer-Lipscomb entry, returned $10.70 to his backers after the trip over the mile and 70 yards course.

Church Call, Pennant Mare, defeated a field of eight in the sixth race to pay $9.30. Mr. Bun and Silent Shot completed the money bracket after a test at a mile and a sixteenth. Sleuth broke alertly today in contrast to his slow previous starts and galloped off with the decision in the seventh race. The E. K. Bryson gelding paid $6.40.

Two Sophomores Carry Georgetown Hopes Saturday

Georgetown's hopes of defeating Lafayette tomorrow at Griffith Stadium will depend largely on the performances of two sophomores who last night were named in the starting line-up by Head Coach Jack Hagerty.

Al Champman, small but ambitious, drew the important quarterback post left vacant by a flock of injuries earlier in the week, and Myron Darohray is slated to start at fullback. The latter played in both the Shenandoah and Holy Cross games and gave an excellent account of himself. Great things are expected of him when he has acquired some much needed experience.

Joe Keegin and Bill Valliquette round out the starting backfield, while the line will be virtually the same that opened against Shenandoah two weeks ago. With their backfield forces sadly depleted the Hoyas are again pretty much of a problem, for any further injuries must be filled by sophomores.

Lafayette's outstanding men appear to be Al Driscol, sophomore tackle, and George Austin, another sophomore holding down the fullback job. The Pennslvanians nosed out Gettysburg last week, 2-0, in a sea of mud, after disposing of Muhlenberg in the season's curtain-raiser.

Weather Hampers Record Speed Tests

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Oct. 14 (AP).—Hampered by rain and a mushy track, Capt. George E. T. Eyston, British racer, failed today to shatter Ab Jenkins' world land speed mark for 12 hours. Eyston's average for the drive was 160.04 miler per hour. Jenkins' record is 160.70. Eyston broke the record of Jenkins for 2,000 kilometers. Eyston's speed for the distance was 163.59 miles an hour. The old record was 162.93.

Pitt Has Edge on Fordham, According to Post Grid Ratings

Harvard Given Nod Over Navy Eleven

By E. E. Litkenhous.

The Leaders.
1. Pittsburg	98.6
2. Alabama	97.3

With the Dukes of Duquesne punished by the predicted Difference-by-Score, the mighty Pitt Panther intends to pounce upon the Fordham Rams in the battle of the week.

Crowley Issued Warnings.

Sleepy Jim Crowley of the Rams has issued a warning to the Panther in trimming Waynesburg by 48-0. His team during that game reached a power point performance of 96.3 to push their average up to 93.9. This shows that the Ram is pointed for Pitt.

Alabama's Crimson Tide, with a rating of 97.3, has risen to second place in national standing by virtue of their 20-0 win over the strong South Carolina Gamecocks.

The trek to the West was too much for Ohio State! Their one-point loss to the Trojans of Southern California lowered their power point average to 91.4 but did not discredit the potent Buckeyes. Coach Schmidt's boys must not be forgotten in Big Ten competition and might sail through to win the Western Conference championship.

Gophers Favored.

Minnesota, 89.9—Meets Michigan, 70.3, and should retain the Little Brown Jug.

Duquesne, 93.—Should run over St. Vincent, 61.5.

Georgia Tech, 92.7—Might administer first defeat on Duke, 83.7, in a hard-fought contest.

California, 88.3—Two breathers for them when they meet College of Pacific, 44.2, and California Ags, 32.6.

Notre Dame, 85.8—It will take an upset for Carnegie Tech, 70.8, to overcome them.

Harvard, 86.9—Will find the Navy, 78.3, no set-up.

St. John's, W.&L. High Meet Today

St. John's up-and-coming cadet eleven will invade Ballston, Va., this afternoon to stack up against the formidable Washington-Lee High School in a game that will fully test the squad which is aiming for the prep school title now held by Gonzaga.

The John's showed promise in their opening game, holding a heavily favored Eastern team to a scoreless tie and actually had an edge in yards gained and first downs. But in the Little Generals, the locals will meet what is probably the strongest scholastic eleven in nearby Virginia. In its only local appearance Washington-Lee dealt Central a 26-to-6 licking and in its latest start battled to a scoreless tie with a powerful Bullis eleven.

St. John's will depend greatly on the ability of its lighter line to shake loose Joe Gallagher, Lee Rinaldi, Bill O'Connor and Frank Cade, its pony backs. But the backfield edge, too, will lie with the opponents who have Tommy Simpson and Forrest Tucker, the pair who ran wild against Central.

Probable line-ups:

St. John's.	Positions.	Wash.-Lee.
Neuland	L.E.	Milks
Beard	L.T.	Voeker
Burch	L.G.	Bungh
Barrett	Center	Anderson
Markwood	R.G.	Rauth

Giebel	R.E.	Leatherwood
Gallagher	Q.B.	Tucker
O'Connor	L.H.	Simpson
Cady	R.H.	Downs
Rinaldi	F.B.	Sprinkle

Eastern High Faces Wilson Eleven Today

Win for Lincoln Parkers Over Tigers Will Shove Them Into Series Lead.

The co-leading Eastern High School eleven has a great opportunity to forge ahead of Tech and Roosevelt in the interhigh series when it meets the green Wilson team at Eastern Stadium at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Eastern, unimpressive in its debut against a spiritless Central outfit, appears to carry too many guns for the lighter, inexperienced Presidents who are in the series for the first time. Wilson dropped its opening engagement to Roosevelt after a hard fight by a 6-to-0 score, but in a manner that forcast a capable eleven before the season advances into November.

Eastern will depend on Al Kidwell and Bill Kemp to lead the offensive, while Wilson will look to Buck Barbee and Dick Mesrobian to head the commotion it hopes to spread against its favored foe.

Probable line-ups:

Wilson.	Positions.	Eastern.
Byer	L.T.	Dickinson
Zeiglier	L.E.	Kearney
Correa	L.G.	McKenney
Miller	Center	Cliff
Squire	R.G.	Stange
Mesrobian	R.T.	Kobre
Hurdle	R.E.	Wade
Bernstein	Q.B.	Kemp
Maloney	L.H.	Murray
Hawksworth	R.H.	Speith
Leech	F.B.	Kidwell

Miss Evelyn Ellis Rolls High Game

Evelyn Ellis, rolling for the Treasury team in the Ladies Federal League, rolled 127 last night for high game, while high set went to Irene Scott at 342. Lola won high team game and set with 542 and 1,509, at Arcade alleys.

In the War Department Men's League, Cavanaugh, Engineers, was high game with 151 and set with 383, while Hydrographic and Armies tied for high team game at 593, and the former won high team set with 1,678.

Credit Bureau, paced by Dave Williams' 372, took first place in the Department Store Bowling League by sweeping the set with Lansburghs at Recreation Alleys.

Rolfe Recovering After Operation

Londos Cancels Match Here; Goes to Paris

Ex-Champion Unable to Fill Engagement at Turner's.

Promoter Joe Turner's elimination tournament to find a suitable opponent for Championship Claimant Jim Londos, which reached the semifinal round last night, and which was to have resulted in a championship match here October 23, was nulled and voided by a telegram received from the Greek stylist late last night.

Even as Joe Cox was wrestling Billy Hanson in one of the semifinal bouts and Dean Detton was grappling with Abe Kashey in the other, Londos wired Turner from New York that a previously scheduled match in Paris would force him to forego the local bout, indefinitely.

Stating that he would be unable to say just when he could fill his engagement here, Londos wired that he will leave for Europe shortly for the match at the Paris Exposition Grounds and then return immediately to the United States.

Meanwhile Joe Cox and Dean Detton won their way to the final round of the elimination. They are listed for the feature bout at Turner's Arena Thursday.

LONDOS.

Marty Gallagher Faces Barlund In Hippodrome Fight Tonight

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Two ten-round bouts, featuring foreign-born boxers, will headline the fight show Promoter Mike Jacobs will offer at the New York Hippodrome tomorrow night.

Three of the four principals in the two-star sevents come from other countries. Only native on the card is Marty Gallagher, of Washington, who goes against Cunnar Barlund, heavyweight champion of Finland. Jorge Brescia, of the Argentine, tackles Andre Lenglet, of France, in the other ten.

From the quartet may come opponents for the Baer brothers, Max and Buddy, Bob Pastor and Tommy Farr for later bouts in Madison Square Garden.

This will be Barlund's first start since intestinal influenza floored him last winer, just when he was making American boxing circles sit up and take notice. Brescia, who once fought Joe Louis, recently returned to this country after a triumphant tour of his native land. Lenglet has been campaigning successfully on the Pacific Coast.

Bisons Are Ready For State Eleven

Howard University's Bisons will meet their first real test of the season when Coach Harry Jefferson and his Virginia State Trojans invade Howard Stadium for the annual game between the two elevens tomorrow.

Boasting a quartet of triple-threat backs in Echols, Bailey, Burr and Briscoe, the latter a graduate of Washington Armstrong High, Virginia State will bring to Washington one of the best backfields in colored collegiate football. Any one of these four ball carriers, it is said, is capable of handling all of the backfield assignments in good style.

State's line, a veteran forward wall from end to end, presents a powerful unit. Capt. "Wimpy" Taylor, center, and the Brewer twins at ends, are the shining lights of the Trojan forwards.

Against this juggernaut, the Bisons will present its most promising Howard squad in years. Although only three lettermen are listed among the 11 starting gridders, the team is a scrappy, never-say-die outfit.

as his end of the purse, which indicates that the featherweight crown is increasing in value. When Freddie Miller fought Sarron for the title and lost at Griffith Stadium in 1926, he was guaranteed only $10,000 which at the time was a new modern high.

* * * *

There is evidence, too, that, despite all of New York's blatant claims, the National Boxing Association title which Sarron's holds is a vastly more precious chattel than New York's recognition of Armstrong as the world champion, Armstrong, in contrast to Sarron, is being guaranteed only $5,000.

* * * *

Sarron, incidentally, campaigned as a professional for a dozen years before he appeared in Madison Square Garden despite the fact that he has been a top-ranking featherweight since 1928. Not that Sarron lacked offers for Garden fights, though. His manager, Jimmy Erwin, merely figured it out—and correctly, that Sarron's earnings would total more in the provinces than they would in New York where a half dozen guys always demanded a cut.

POST NOTES ON Fishin'

BY BILL ACKERMAN

The shoal of rock that Shadyside boats have been working on for over four months on the west side of the bay have gone over to Eastern Bay and are lying just inside; feeding and breaking throughout the day. Catches run up to any number the individual party cares to take. Late Wednesday evening two boats out of Annapolis headed for home with close to 150 each and weighing up six pounds. No blues or trout, but they would hardly be missed with that kind of fishing—trolling without weight. Bottom fishing is poor.

ACKERMAN

Capt. Bob Lee's boats are not oystering as has been reported but are still carrying parties and will continue to do so for the next four to six weeks. Always a good idea to call ahead. Same applies to Annapolis, because here many of the boats have started oystering.

Will Hayden, captain on one of Ed Bowen's boats at Solomons, fished the Lump at St. Leonards for several hours early Wednesday afternoon and the catch was exactly 225 yellow perch weighing about three-quarters of a pound each.

* * * *

For real sport these cagey little gamesters rate a flyrod, but will put up a good scrap on even a handline. Really a freshwater fish, they are not averse to dropping down in the salt water, at this time of the year to get in on the easy feeding; and don't let the name given them at Solomons throw you off, because there the name in black perch.

Several small trout and rock were caught at the same place; in no way comparable to what the catches have been. It is very improbable that we had enough cold weather to start the trout on their Southern migration, but if we get it this week-end as promised there is no doubt that they will be on their way next week.

* * * *

The rock are shoaled in the mouth of the Patuxent, from Cedar Point to Cove Point, so thick that they are like sardines in a can. Breaking solidly throughout the evening, with thousands upon thousands of gulls working over them, they make a picture that most anglers would travel miles to see, and when it is possible to snake big catches out of the shoals, as is the case here, of fish that run in weight from 4 to 7 pounds, it makes it just that much more attractive.

This is going to be one of the best fishing grounds anywhere on the bay for the next four or five weeks, and even up to Christmas, for that matter, if the fishermen have what it takes to go after them, because it is some time in January before the rock hunt the deep holes to winter.

* * * *

Equally as good, though, is the rock fishing around Piney Point and up on the shore to Tall Timbers and McKays Beach. Last year at this point Capt. L. M. Spriggs fished them up to the third week in December, and expects to do so this season if the demand for his boats continues. It is still necessary to make your reservations ahead if you want to fish with him.

Aldrich Lays Stock Fall to Government

Restrictive Policies Should Be Modified, Says Chase Bank Head.

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 14.—The present drastic slump in share prices has revealed "an impairment of efficiency" of the stock market which calls for "prompt correction," Winthrop W. Aldrich, New York banker, said today to the Rochester Chamber of Commerce.

Aldrich, who is chairman of the Chase National Bank, largest United States bank, said that the "acute thinness" of the market was largely the cause of "extraordinarily drastic and severe" price movements on even a moderate amount of selling. He attributed the thinness to "the cumulative effect of a variety of recent Government policies," many of which, he contended, should be modified.

Among them he enumerated the capital gains tax, high and rigid margin requirements, the rule requiring officers of corporations and other "insiders" to hold stocks of their own concerns for at least six months before taking a profit and a number of regulations of the Securities Exchange Commission affecting dealers in securities.

"The break which began in mid-August is not to be attributed to current business or foreign selling," Aldrich asserted. "The foreign news may easily have induced a substantial volume of domestic selling of securities, and a decline in confidence in the political future may well have been a substantial factor.

Market Too Thin.

"But the response in stock market prices to a moderate volume of selling, however induced, was extraordinarily drastic and severe. Moderate selling of securities found a market so restricted and so thin that it 'couldn't take it.'"

Aldrich's speech recalled a similar statement made by Charles R. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange, last August calling for modification of some restrictions on which he blamed the "illiquidity" of the market. At that time he asserted wide price fluctuations would take place when pressure was exerted, either from the selling or the buying side.

The capital gains tax, Aldrich declared, has forced men of substantial means to stay out of the market, thereby contributing to its "thinness." He suggested that the tax, at high bracket income tax rates, be changed to a low rate flat tax, which, he asserted, would give the Treasury a positive gain in revenue.

Registers Protest.

"In general," Aldrich said, "the legislative policy which has been developed since 1933 with respect to the issue of new securities and with respect to the stock market itself, has had the purpose of increasing the honesty of the stock market, preventing the abuse of fiduciary relations and creating a situation in which temptation to abuse fiduciary relations would be reduced. I am in hearty sympathy with the purpose of this.

"On the other hand, I wish to protest with great vigor against the continued condemnation of the great body of bankers or other men in financial institutions as if dishonesty and abuse of fiduciary relations were the typical and prevalent thing. They have always been the exception, and have always been condemned by the great body of bankers and other financial men."

Cotton Reacts; October 8.43

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Cotton reacted today under liquidation and profit relaizing attracted by the recent rally. December eased from 8.33 to 8.23 and closed at 8.25, with final prices 14 to 20 points net lower.

The market opened 7 to 12 points lower in response to the action of foreign markets and under an overnight accumulation of hedge selling. However, there was enough commission house, Wall Street and trade buying to impart a fairly steady undertone.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil was firm today on further covering and renewed commission house buying, promoted by expectations Government purchases will begin soon, the strength in lard and the firmness of crude. Final prices were 12 to 48 points net higher with sales of 229 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; October closed, 7.58; December, 7.34; January, 7.36; March, 7.38; May, 7.44.

Cotton Seat Down $1,500.

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Arrangements have been made for sale of a membership on the New York Cotton Exchange for $11,500, a decline of $1,500 from the previous sale.

Wheat Prices Decline After Early Advance

Late Selling to Realize Profits Wipes Out 1½-Cent Gain.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—For the most part, lower wheat prices became the rule at the last today after the market had registered a zigzag course 1½ cents upward.

Late selling to realize profits was a feature of wheat operations, with considerable notice being taken of unsettled conditions pointing to likelihood of beneficial rains in dry areas of domestic winter crop territory Southwest. The preceding advances of wheat values were largely based on estimates that during four successive days the export buying of United States hard winter wheat has averaged daily 1,000,000 bushels or more.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were varying from 1¼-cent decline to ¼-cent advance; December, 97⅞@98; May, 98½@98¾; July, 92@92⅛; corn, ⅛@⅞ down; December, 58¼@58⅝; May, 59⅜@59½; July, 60; oats, ⅛@½ up; December, 29½, and rye showing ¼@⅜ gain; December, 73. Provisions results ranged from 2 cents setback to 17 cents bulge.

Stock Prices Weaken After Moderate Advance in Early Trading.

New York, Oct. 14.—Bonds and commodities spent a more satisfactory day, but stocks after a firmer tone during most of the trading weakened in the last hour and gave up more than the early gains. Stock turnover was around 1,700,000 shares, the smallest of the week. December wheat closed unchanged at 97⅞ cents a bushel.

Recovery in industrial shares was greater than that among the rails and public utilities. The most buoyant group was the farm shares as the market awakened to the possibilities under the Government's plan to rush through a new system of farm doles and bonuses. Deere was a favorite, quickly running up three or four points. Steel was active, but had trouble in holding near its previous closing price. Chrysler also found the going a bit difficult at times.

Some Good Gainers.

Advances were easier to obtain and maintain in some other groups. Chemicals did well and mail orders, tobaccos, oils and metals were favored. Motors were inclined to be unsteady, with steels, especially in the last hour. Rails were fairly steady. In the class of 1 to 5 point risers were Deere, duPont, General Electric, Hercules Powder, Manville, Allis Chalmers, Loew's, Owens Glass, Philip Morris, Pullman, Shell Union, Timken Roller and Westinghouse. Loose-Wiles turned sour on reduction of the dividends. A number of stocks in which no sales were made over the past few days were brought into line with 2 to 7 point declines.

Less Cotton Used.

Business indices of the day were indicative of some decline in trade last month. Cotton consumed in September was slightly less than the amount used in August and was moderately under that of a year ago. Exports of cotton, on the other hand, rose about 8 per cent last month as compared with a year ago, thanks to the lower prices. Some interest may be drawn to the fact that although output of cotton goods fell in September from the figure of a year ago, the number of spindles in use was substantially greater. Raw cotton is proving to be a better bargain for the foreigner, but the domestic consumer is not finding a buyer's market for cotton goods.

On the retail side, the country's largest mail order house, Sears, Roebuck & Co., reported for the four weeks ended October 8 the second largest dollar sales for a similar period in its history. The dollar volume was exceeded only in the Christmas period of last year. That rise reflects mainly the increase in farm purchasing power and, to some extent, the higher prices prevailing. Retail prices in general declined last month, according to the Fairchild index, after 13 consecutive monthly increases.

Placing the Blame.

It is seldom that a prominent banker dares to speak out in defense of the stock market. As a rule he prefers to leave undisturbed tre popular illusion that speculation of any sort is something entirely foreign to banks. He fears that a defense of security markets might be interpreted to mean that he is defending speculation as a proper function of banking. In this connection the address made in Rochester this afternoon by Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, is instructive and refreshing.

Mr. Aldrich shows how vital it is to banking security and to business itself to have a broad, active market, capable of absorbing large sales without panic, and one that can be counted upon for supporting orders when, because of sudden crises, quick assistance may be necessary. There may be those who will not agree with the implications of Mr. Aldrich's address, that, before the days of the securities and exchange law and other market restrictions, a broad and deep market always was at hand. Certainly the 1929 crash came without benefit of SEC or New Deal.

Bad Laws.

In suggesting the causes of the thinness of the market and its extreme nervousness, Mr. Aldrich also gives some explanation of the 1929 severe decline. Although not admitting that adverse business, political or financial news changed the trend of prices this time, he lists a number of factors which hastened the fall (after in some cases exaggerating the preceding rise) and destroyed the liquidity of the market. First he places the capital gains tax, a law which was also responsible in part for unsettled conditions before the New Deal.

Especial stress is placed by Mr. Aldrich on the provision of the securities and exchange act hampering the operations of corporation officials and directors in buying and selling shares of their companies. Lastly he comes to the margin requirements and to the purely regulative part of the Securities and Exchange Commission, such as petty annoyances to brokers in searching the records, the restrictions on specialists, and the general assumption that every one is dishonest and that everything done is malicious, unless the contrary can be proven.

Tax Boomerang.

Mr. Aldrich has touched upon all the sore spots of the markets, but so strong is the idea implanted in the public mind that stock market gamblers cause all the woes of business that reform, however obvious the need, may be difficult in obtaining. It may be that we will have to undergo another experience similar to that of 1929-1932 in order to substitute sound legislation for and to repeal laws passed as supposed cures for the ills suffered in that period. A splendid start could be made with drastic changes in the capital gains tax and elimination of the undistributed profits tax.

By the end of the year the Government may begin to perceive that lections from operation of the capital now stands to lose more than it can hope to gain in current tax coltal gains tax, and certainly the undistributed profits tax is beginning to back up on its sponsors as an infection in the wound. Business is now feeling the absence of purchasing power inflated a year ago by the soldiers' bonus and the high, wide and handsome distribution of extra dividends as an escape from the penalty profits tax. Business is now coming to see that it would better pay the tax—if any—an conserve its cash, for the capital market is refusing to supply new capital ad lib. Individuals are finding in the capital gains tax a means to take losses and write off a portion of tax liability on ordinary income.

Holding Act Doom, Big Utility Fears

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—C. E. Groesbeck, chairman of the board of Electric Bond & Share Co., told stockholders at the annual meeting today that "the company could not continue to exist, at least in its present form," if the public utility holding company act were declared constitutional. He said that the act disregarded the years of experience gained by the private utility companies and sought to enforce geographic corporate integration and remake the utility map of the United States. The company has challenged the constitutionality of the act and the matter is now pending in the courts.

Banker Points Ways to Plan Life Trusts

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Ways and means of co-operation between the life underwriting profession and the trust departments of banking institutions in planning testamentary and life insurance trusts were discussed by Bernard L. Amiss, an assistant trust officer of Washington Loan & Trust Co., at the October meeting of the District of Columbia Chapter, Chartered Life Underwriters, held this week at the Cosmos Club.

Mr. Amiss explained the very definite ways in which a combination of life insurance and trust department service can best assist the aims and purposes of clients. After his address, a forum discussion was held, helping to clarify many of the practices of trust service in cooperation with underwriters.

McLachlen's Anniversary.

President Lanier P. McLachlen of McLachlen Banking Corporation, celebrated his fifteenth year as chief executive of that institution this week, having assumed presidency of the bank in 1922. Long associated in banking and civic activities of the National Capital, he is a past president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association and Columbia Country Club.

Chairman of the Washington Better Business Bureau, he is also a trustee of American University and the Young Men's Christian Association, in Washington, a director of the National Capital Insurance Co. of the District of Columbia, and a member of the executive committee of the National Capital Committee, Washington Board of Trade. In the World War, he was a captain in the Army Air Service and saw duty overseas.

I. B. A. Speakers.

Among speakers at the convention of the Investment Bankers Association of America, at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., will be George C. Mathews, a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission. A program of forums on regulation of the investment business and public utilities industry, Federal taxation, and municipal finance, will feature the twenty-sixth annual meeting next month. An additional speaker will be Dr. John H. Williams, Harvard professor, who is vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. State Treasurer Charles M. Johnson, of North Carolina, is also scheduled to address the assembly.

Besides the five forums, there will be three general sessions covering late developments in business and finance; committee reports on research work and the annual election. Francis E. Frothingham, Boston, named to succeed Edward B. Hall, Chicago, to the presidency, was a resident of Washington during the World War, heading the public utilities division of the War Finance Corporation. Born in Brooklyn, he has been in the investment business in Boston for many years and has been active in the affairs of the association.

Increased sales from larger 1937 crops continue to augment the farmers' income in August and receipts from the sale of principal farm products in all regions, except the North Atlantic, were larger than in August last year, reports from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reveal. Cash income from all farm marketings in August was $766,000,000, compared with $635,000,000 in August last year, the bureau announces. Federal payments to farmers in August amounted to $5,000,000, compared with $11,000,000 in the month a year ago.

The 12 regional banks of the Federal Home Loan Bank System mark their fifth anniversary today, with gross assets of member institutions at a high of $3,893,695,000. A gain of more than $250,000,000 in August and September is attributable to an increase in the system's membership.

Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor has reported liquidation of 53 national bank receiverships during September, 1937, making a total of 826 receiverships finally closed or restored to solvency since the banking holiday of March, 1933.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Leading European currencies, with the exception of The Netherlands guilder, moved narrowly upward against the dollar in foreign exchange dealings yesterday.

In New York the pound sterling was A of a cent higher at 4.96⅛. French francs added .00¾ of a cent at 3.37 cents and Swiss francs were up .00½ of a cent at 23.01½ cents. The guilder dropped .03 of a cent at 55.26 cents, due, traders said, to renewed Dutch purchases of American securities. Canadian dollars were unchanged at 100.03⅛ cents.

The dollar lost A of a cent in London, closing at 4.96⅛ to the pound, which compared with the New York overnight rate of 4.95⅛. It finished in Paris at the equivalent of 3.373 cents to the franc against the New York overnight rate of 3.3625 cents.

On the Air Today

The Washington String Quartet, made up of Milton Schwartz and Paul Brightenburg, violinists; George Wargo, violist, and J. Alden Finckel, cellist, will play Gliere-Balaieff's famous quartet, WJSV, at 3 p. m., in a network program originating in Washington's studios.

• • • •

Lucille Manners, soprano, sings "Arabian Nights," by Grever, and Blaufuss' "Your Eyes Have Told Me So," WRC, at 8. Robert Simmons sings "Somewhere A Voice Is Singing" and, with Miss Manners, "Let's Fall in Love."

• • • •

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be heard in connection with the concluding ceremonies in connection with the Silver Jubilee celebration of the Camp Fire Girls, WJSV, at 10:45. She talks on "Let Your Daughter Grow Up."

• • • •

Secretary Ickes talks from the annual banquet of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, WJSV, at 11:30.

• • • •

"Aida" will be aired from the stage of the San Francisco Opera House, WRC, at 12 midnight. Gina Cigna, Giovanni Martenelli and Richard Bonelli head the cast.

• • • •

Arthur Godfrey presents another of his all-night broadcasts, this time in the interests of the American Red Cross membership drive, starting at WJSV at 1 a. m. He will be assisted by Johnnie Salb, WJSV staff organist and volunteer assistant of the Red Cross.

Bob Burns Says—

Many a home has been broken up by unfounded suspicion. My Aunt Kezzy Moomaw objected to my uncle chewin' tobacco. Finally one night he promised her he would quit but she was a suspicious woman and she decided to check up on him.

The next morning she sneaked out behind the hedge where he was plowin' and sure enough, here he come plowin' down the row with a big lump in his jaw. If she had turned then and had gone back home, both of their lives woulda been ruined, but she was one of them strong women that faced the situation.

She jumped out from behind the hedge and ran up to him and says, "I thought you promised you would quit chewin'?" He says, "I did." She says, "Well, what's that big lump in your jaw?" And she was so happy when he told her that it was just a prune he was soakin' to eat when he finished plowin'.

ROY POWERS, EAGLE SCOUT— The Beam Moves at Last! By Paul Powell

WHAT ARE YOU SAYING, ROCKY? ROY AND CHUNKY—NOT IN THERE—?
OH, IT'S HORRIBLE! ROY FOUND THAT MRS. KEELER REALLY STOLE THE DIAMOND MY DAD WAS ACCUSED OF TAKING AND—
HE TRIED TO GET IT BACK—SHE LOCKED HIM UP—THEN THE HOUSE CAUGHT FIRE AND CHUNKY WENT TO SAVE HIM AND OH, MR. STUART, THEY DID IT ALL FOR ME—!
IN ONE LAST LIFE AND DEATH EFFORT, ROY PUSHES DOWN ON THE BEAM INSTEAD OF UP. IT MOVES—
